Lebanon War Pulls Mideast To Brink: UN

Times News Services

NEW YORK — United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said today that disorder in southern Lebanon threatens to bring the whole Mideast region closer to the brink of war.

Waldheim said a plan for extending the Beirut government's control over southern Lebanon has been partly implemented but the UN peacekeeping force there still is far from fulfilling this objective.

Referring to opposition from Lebanese Christian militia who control an enclave along the border with Israel, he said in a report to the UN Security Council:

"Despite all efforts, the necessary co-operation has not been forthcoming for further deployment of UNIFIL (the UN Interim Force in Lebanon).

The south Lebanon border zone was reported quiet today after three days of clashes in which Lebanese Christian militia chief Maj. Saad Haddad's troops attacked UN peacekeeping forces with machine-gun and mortar fire.

Meanwhile, Israeli Defence Minister Ezer Weizman today defended Haddad's proclamation Wednesday of Free Lebanon, a so-called independent republic north of the Israeli border, as the work of a true Lebanese patriot who shares Israel's goals:

"There is no question that he is a partner to our goals," Weizman said. "There is a common interest between us."

Waldheim's report said the position of the Israeli government, which supports the Christian militia, "will be crucial for efforts to achieve further progress in the coming months."

Waldheim warned that if UNIFIL is seriously eroded, its achievements would be nullified and the world would face a highly dangerous situation in the area.

"Such a situation would not only be a new disaster for the government and people of Lebanon, but could lead to a renewed and serious deterioration of the situation in the Middle East as a whole," he said.

With both the United States and UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim urging Israel to restrain Haddad, Prime Minister Menachem Begin said in a letter to Waldheim Thursday that while his government exercises influence on the major, it is in no position to "issue orders" to him.

In Cairo today, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat was reported to have received a 99.9 per cent "Yes" vote in a national referendum on Egypt's peace treaty with Israel.

Radar Nabbing Speedy Bikers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police are putting a spoke in cyclists' fun by using vehicle-designed radar detectors to also catch speeding two-wheeled enthusiasts.

One cyclist caught by a radar trap set up in Stanley Park sped through at 60 kilometres an hour — twice the maximum limit.

"They're a real hazard," said Staff Sergeant Ken McLarty. "Cyclists have got to be made more aware of the problems they can cause.

"They've got very little breaking power when they're belting down a hill at over 60 kilometres an hour. I know they don't have speedometres on their bikes, but when you're on a 10-speed bike and start passing cars, you know you're going fast."

McLarty said two cyclists received tickets, but were charged with disobeying a traffic sign, not speeding.

"We couldn't charge them with speeding because they're not a motor vehicle and the law specifies motor vehicles. So we issued them tickets for disobeying the maximum speed signs."

He said police won't be concentrating on cyclists but hope the examples will serve as a warning.

Sport Fishing Worth $31M

The commercial and sports fishing industries inject $40 million annually into the Greater Victoria economy — with the lion's share of that coming from sports anglers, a nine-month study has found.

The report, prepared for the provincial environment ministry by K. van Westen and Associates of Victoria, determined commercial fishing contributes $16 million, fish processing another $5.5 million and sport fishing adds $18 million to the area economy for a total of $39.5 million annually.

But adding the expenditures for direct goods and services required for sport fishing and major related purchases of recreation equipment and property together, results in a total of $30.7 million spent in Greater Victoria by resident and visitor sport fishermen in 1978.

The ministry commissioned the study last July to analyse the current impact and future potential for fisheries-related activities in the area, and to identify means of projecting the basic environmental requirements of the fishery resource, Environment Minister Rafe Mair said.

The report states that about 19 per cent of the Greater Victoria population, or more than 45,000, participated in saltwater and/or freshwater angling in 1978.

The study says the vast majority of the sports fishermen concentrate on saltwater angling, with only about 4 per cent listed as exclusively fishing freshwater.

"The tidal waters surrounding Greater Victoria consistently receive a total angling effort (recorded in boat days) second only to the Comox-Courtenay area," says the document. It also reports that 21.4 per cent of B.C.'s sport caught salmon are taken in Greater Victoria waters.

More than 10,000 visitors to the area participate each year in sport fishing.

Air Disaster Crew Cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. federal safety board today blamed an airliner's flight crew for North America's worst air disaster, but declined to accuse it of lack of discipline in the cockpit.

The U.S. National Transportation Safety Board agreed by a 4-to-0 vote that the crew of Pacific Southwest Airlines flight 182 was responsible when the jet collided with a small Cessna 172 over San Diego on Sept. 25. The planes fell into a residential area and 144 persons were killed.

The board said the crew failed to keep track of the Cessna as required by the visual approach rules.

The vote on the primary cause of the accident confirmed a tentative decision reached Thursday. But it was not formally adopted until today because board members were divided on what to list as contributing causes.

The board said Thursday that a cockpit voice recording indicated there was a lax, unprofessional atmosphere in the airliner's cockpit and one of the proposed contributing causes was "lack of cockpit discipline by the crew." That was eliminated today on a 2-to-2 vote.

The board remained divided on a total of 10 proposed contributing causes and adopted only one of them. That one blamed air traffic control procedures "which authorize controllers to use visual approach procedures to separate two aircraft on potentially conflicting tracks."

Clark Tagged 'Waiter'

Canadian Press

Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday that Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark would be a washy-washy prime minister, a head waiter who would take orders from Conservative premiers.

(These and other federal election stories pages 20, 21 and 23.)

As Trudeau castigated Clark in Newfoundland, Clark was introduced to the Empire Club in Toronto as the man who will be "Joe Now" when Canadians vote May 22.

Clark was dubbed "Joe Who" shortly after becoming party leader in 1976.

"There's no distinction between a Joe Trudeau and a Pierre Clark," New Democrat Leader Ed Broadbent told Vancouver Island audiences, saying there is no difference between the Liberal and Conservative parties.

At a busy pulp mill in Port Alberni, Broadbent saw a roll of newsprint with the slogan "Vote NDP" scrawled on it in red letters.

In Toronto, Clark told 1,300 businessmen Trudeau has improved the lot of French-Canadians but doesn't understand that Canada is "a community of communities."

A Conservative government would bring constitutional changes to give federal leadership in economics and provincial leadership in culture.

A BRIC Share Con? Police Mystified

The Victoria Better Business Bureau and city police fraud squad are mystified by a report of a possible confidence scheme involving the B.C. Resource Investment Corporation shares.

But how the scheme works no one can say, not even Don Alexander, general manager of the B.C. Systems Corporation which processes share applications.

Concern arose when Mrs. Lena Palmer of 307-155 Gorge Road East reported to the BBB that a woman came to her home last Friday and offered to help her apply for her five free BCRIC shares.

The woman, whom Mrs. Palmer described as middle-aged and well-dressed, left an application form and said she'd return in a few days to pick it up. The shares would be then be sent to her in the mail.

Mrs. Palmer said the woman had several completed application forms in her hand but didn't give her name nor did she indicate who she represented in providing her "free service."

The woman phoned on Monday and became belligerent when Mrs. Palmer's daughter told her that her mother had

Wreckage Sifted for Clues

Transport Canada investigators today were sifting through the twisted remains of a Pacific Coastal Airlines plane that crashed and burned Thursday morning near Cassidy Airport killing all six aboard.

A spokesman said parts of wreckage including both engines will be taken to Vancouver later today for detailed examination to determine the cause of the mishap, the first fatal crash at the airport in more than 20 years.

RCMP in Nanaimo said the crash victims were:

Pilot Gary Raindahl, 31, of Vancouver, and passengers Gavin Robertson, 33, Mrs. Nancy Burrell and her two children Joshua, 5, and Jeffrey, 2 — all of Vancouver, and Norman Calvin of Burlington, Ont.

First reports following the 11:34 a.m. crash indicated five persons had died but a sixth body was discovered in the wreckage.

Pacific Coastal manager Don McGillivray said the plane was on a regularly scheduled flight to Port Alberni.

The passengers had arrived from Vancouver earlier in the morning.

He said Raindahl, a former Harrison Airlines pilot who had been with Pacific Coastal six months, gave no indication of problems as he

It said that fishermen fish for the fun of it, to be in a quiet state, to have close contact with nature and in order to get rid of tensions and frustrations.

Other findings of the study include:

— Resident and visitor sports fishermen spent more than $22 million for food, lodging, transportation, fishing gear, fishing services and other direct goods and services in 1978.

— Greater Victoria area residents spent more than $10 million in 1978 to cover operating costs for the 16,500 pleasure craft they own.

— Resident and visitor anglers also spent about $28.9 million in '78 for the puchase of boats, motors, trailers, recreational vehicles, summer cottages, camping equipment and similar goods.

— The local commercial fishing fleet comprises 521 vessels worth more than $25 million.

— Victoria area processing plants handle more than eight million pounds of products annually worth $13.5 million.

— Commercial fishing employs more than 2,200 people in both direct and indirect capacities for a total income of $21.4 million.

Tanzanians Reach Jinja

KAMPALA (UPI) — Tanzanian troops today closed in on Idi Amin's last known hideout of Jinja in a campaign to return order to Uganda. The government restored the Monday-to-Friday workweek and called for the surrender of hold-out soldiers.

The streets of the capital were still littered with several hundred bodies of victims from last week's capture of the city, but a clean-up force moved to collect corpses lying in the blistering tropical sun.

Nearly 1,000 Tanzanian soldiers supported by tanks and armored personnel carriers approached the country's second largest city of Jinja, which they said they would capture in hours.

The government announced the lifting of a ban on all foreign newspapers and periodicals and reinstituted the Monday-to-Friday workweek abolished by Amin, a Moslem, who had ordered a split weekend of Friday and Sunday rest days.

The country's only international airport at nearby Entebbe was now "out of bounds" by government order and closed for repairs. But some light aircraft carrying journalists, diplomats and businessmen used the field.

Jinja was the last known hideout of Idi Amin, where he had threatened to make a "last stand." But refugees from the city said most of his troops had already fled leaving a path of looting, raping and killing.

Amin's whereabouts were unknown. Government ministers said they were convinced he had fled to Libya. He had not been heard of for more than a week.

Lt. Col. Nasur Abdul Abdallah, Amin's former governor of Kampala, was interviewed by Nairobi's Standard newspaper in a refugee camp near the frontier where more than 1,000 persons are being screened by the Kenyan government.

Abdallah escaped with two Mercedes-Benz limousines, a minibus, a Fiat car and a truck — as well as four wives and 28 children

Irish Draw Cancelled

DUBLIN (CP) — For the first time in the 49-year history of the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes, a draw has been cancelled.

A spokesman for the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes Organization said today that "because of continuing disruption of the Irish postal services, it will not be possible to hold the draw on the Spring Handicap scheduled for May 3."

The draw was to have been for the horse race to be held at Doncaster, May 7.

The Irish republic has been hit by a post office workers union strike for nine weeks, cutting the country off from all mail — domestic and international — and wiping out all operator-assisted phone calls.

The spokesman said:

"All the counterfoils of paid-for tickets on the Irish Sweeps Spring Handicap will be entered for the next scheduled draw, on the Irish Sweeps Derby."

This draw will be held on June 28.

Rhodesian Air Strikes

SALISBURY (AP) — Rhodesian military planes struck at guerrilla targets in southern Mozambique today, the military command announced.

The raid was the first cross-border attack since the start Tuesday of Rhodesia's elections for a black-majority government. Black guerrillas, based in neighboring countries, have vowed to disrupt the elections, saying the new government will be merely a front for continued white rule.

Today's communique said only: "Combined operations headquarters advises that during the course of this afternoon terrorist targets in the Gaza province of Mozambique were subjected to air strikes. All aircraft returned safely to base."

Gaza province borders on southeastern Rhodesia and on northeastern South Africa.

Before the elections, Rhodesian military and ground forces made a number of strikes against targets in Zambia, Botswana, Mozambique and Angola. In one raid, ground troops destroyed guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo's home in Lusaka, capital of Zambia.

Meanwhile, voting slowed to a trickle today but officials hoped for a last-minute surge to bring the turnout over the 60-per-cent mark.

Officials said by noon today nearly 52 per cent of the estimated 2.9 million voters had cast ballots. They expected a big turnout during the afternoon, a half holiday, and on the last day of polling Saturday.

Since the voting started Tuesday, black nationalist guerrillas have killed an election official, burned at least one village, mined a truckload of voters and intimidated many other blacks to keep them from the polls.

Kahl Wins SC Nod

Lyle Kahl won handily over Frank Heinrich for the Social Credit nomination in the Esquimalt-Port Renfrew riding Thursday night.

Although chairman Bud Mesher declined to give the final tally of the voting by the 262 registered delegates, it was clear from the response to the two candidates that Kahl's nomination was never in doubt.

Happy Valley resident Heinrich, a former Toronto businessman who moved here six years ago, has criticized the provincial government for not doing anything about dumping sewage into the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

He said he sought the nomination because he believed the people should have a choice.

Kahl, teacher-businessman who won the seat in 1975 by 221 votes over New Democratic Party candidate Frank Mitchell, said a lot of hard work had been involved in the twinning of the Trans-Canada Highway, increasing the size of the Priory Hospital and the go-ahead on the Helmcken Road Hospital.

Kahl promised the Sooke Potholes Park boundaries will be extended during Social Credit's next term and salmonid enhancement programs in the riding would be increased.

Strong Jolt In Alaska

Times News Services

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A strong earthquake occurred in Southern Alaska early today in the same area rocked by a major earthquake nearly two months ago, the U.S. Geological survey reported.

Meanwhile, a minor earthquake, centred about 25 kilometres southeast of Saint John, N.B. in the Bay of Fundy, also occurred early this morning.

Lost Film Worth $7,500

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — When film processors lose or destroy photographs or home movies, they cannot get off the hook by merely supplying fresh rolls of film, the Washington state supreme court has ruled.

A unanimous judgment upholds an earlier lower court ruling that granted $7,500 in damages to Edwin Mieske and his wife from the Bartell Drug Co. and GAF Corporation, a film processing company.

The family had taken the drug company more than two dozen reels of developed movie film to be spliced into larger reels. The film covered years of family life.

But the film was sent on to the developer without the knowledge of the family and was lost.

The court rejected the companies' contention that all they had to do was give the family undeveloped film. The firms had noted that a receipt given the family said the companies assumed no responsibility beyond the retail cost of the film unless there was a written agreement stating otherwise.

"Awarding plaintiffs the funds to purchase 32 rolls of blank film is hardly a replacement of images which they have recorded over the years," the judgment said.

Beating Witness Sought

City police today appealed for public help in locating a possible witness to an attack by five men on a 57-year-old man near the Beacon Hill Park Lookout Sunday night.

Insp. Angus Stewart, head of the detectives branch, said there are indications someone sitting in a vehicle parked nearby saw the attack which sent Joseph Longpre, 1326 Johnson, with multiple cuts and bruises.

Stewart said during the attack the headlights of the vehicle flicked on and off and scared off the attackers.

Police would like to contact the witness in connection with their investigation which has resulted so far in the arrest of three suspects.

Disease Fears In Quake Wake

TITOGRAD (Reuter) — Giant U.S. transport planes led the airlift of relief pouring into southern Yugoslavia today for 80,000 earthquake victims left without homes and threatened by disease.

With officials concerned about the threat of epidemics after Sunday's earthquake caved in water wells and left livestock carcasses rotting unattended, aid from both the east and west included water purification equipment.

Everyone between ages three and 60 has been inoculated against typhoid as some of the 200 people killed in the devastating earthquake still lie buried beneath tons of debris.

U.S. Air Force planes were bringing in 118 tons of equipment, including tents, generators and field hospitals. Switzerland supplied a mobile purification plant while 50,000 gallons of bottled mineral water were dispatched from Belgrade.

The heavy rain and fog which hampered relief work and deepened the misery of people huddled under umbrellas and repeatedly shaken by fresh tremors stopped Thursday.

But temperatures remained below freezing as army and police helicopters ferried supplies to badly hit outlying villages. Other teams made their way along treacherous mountain paths.

Damage from the earthquake has been estimated at $500 million and as relief work stepped up, other officials worked to keep the region's major industry, tourism, working.

Many tourist hotels on the coast lie in ruins but officials said some 10,000 of the 24,000 hotel beds in the region are still available, with between 5,000 and 10,000 beds in private accommodation.

He's tired, says Johnny Carson, therefore, he wants out of his NBC contract; he insists "there are no fights and no threats" over the issue. A tight-lipped network spokesman, however, indicated a fight very well may be in the offing. Carson said in Los Angeles Thursday he is discussing the possibility with NBC that he may leave the Tonight Show before the expiration of his contract in two years. "I decided to leave because I don't think I can keep up the level of quality in the show any more," he said. "I am no longer able to bring to it everything I would like to do. After 17 years I am mentally and emotionally tired." In Burbank, the network spokesman retorted with one sentence and refused to elaborate. "NBC has a contract with Carson that continues to the spring of 1981 and we expect him to honor it."

Over at ABC and a continent away, commentator Howard K. Smith, complaining about "hazy" job duties, has notified the network he will resign when his current contract expires in May. "His resignation comes as a sorry surprise to us," an ABC-News spokesman said today, noting that the network and Smith had been in the process of negotiating a new five-year contract. In a letter to his colleagues, posted on the bulletin board at ABC News' office in Washington, Smith says: "They (the network) have been so hazy about what I would do that it sounds increasingly to me like a job without a function." He adds that he feels he is being denied an "opportunity to practice my craft."

HAWN
. . . a daughter

Very happy, however, is Oscar-winning actress Goldie Hawn who Thursday gave birth to a baby girl at Cedars-Sinai Medical Centre in LA. "Goldie wanted a girl, so it all worked out," says hospital spokesman David Parks. The child, Kate Garry Hudson, weighed nine pounds, four ounces.

The on-again, off-again, on-again marriage of John and Greta Rideout is off again — this time, apparently, for keeps. The Rideouts were divorced Thursday in the same Salem, Ore., courtroom in which they made international headlines when she filed rape charges against him in December — the first time in the United States that a wife formally had accused a husband of that crime while living with him. He was acquitted — after $18,000 worth of trial. The Rideouts kissed and made up on Jan. 6, but split again on March 29. They say they're glad to have it over with — that they're on friendly terms with no hard feelings.

In case you've been missing his words of wisdom, take heart from the fact that Billy Carter will meet reporters Monday for the first time since being admitted six weeks ago to the Long Beach Naval Hospital for treatment of alcoholism, according to a statement from his manager. Tandy Rice said Thursday the U.S. president's brother will give a brief statement and answer questions at the hospital. Carter, who has been in the hospital's alcohol and drug abuse unit since March 6, has been paying the civilian rate of $266 a day. When he was admitted, a hospital spokesman said Carter would stay six to eight weeks.

World champion Anatoly Karpov of the USSR drew with countryman Mikhail Tal after just 13 moves in seventh-round play of the Man and His World Challenge Cup chess tournament in Montreal Thursday. Spectators appeared disappointed by the match, which lasted less than an hour, but experts said they were not surprised since Tal was Karpov's unofficial coach during the last world chess match in the Phillippines.

And, finally, the former wife of the late Elvis Presley says the entertainer was very disappointed in not being chosen to play the male lead in the film A Star Is Born opposite Barbra Streisand. "He was really more upset than most people know," Priscilla Presley told McCall's magazine. "… The decision not to do it was made for him; it was one of the big disappointments of his life."

Blast Rips Michelangelo Rome Square

The powerful explosion smashed the first-floor door of the senatorial palace, opening on to ornate steps above a beautiful fountain dominating the capitol's 16th Century square.

Windows of two other palaces flanking the small square on a hill overlooking the Roman Forum all were broken by the explosion, but no other damage was discovered. Experts said the damaged door could be repaired by putting together pieces of smashed marble.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the blast, which occurred at about 1 a.m.

Italian state radio called the bombing a "barbaric attack on civilization." Pro-Communist Rome Mayor Carlo Gii Argan said the attack on the door, which leads into the municipal council hall, was "clearly Fascist."

"Michelangelo conceived St Peter's as the religious centre of the city and the capitol as the civil centre," he added. "A clearly Fascist attack has tried to strike at this symbol of institutions and culture, celebrated throughout the world, to achieve greater publicity."

Firemen and experts worked through the night after the blast, and at midmorning were checking cornices, statues, ledges and other decorations of the three palaces on the square.

Tourists, who usually throng the square, were kept away.

Babies Wired For Wetness

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — There are smoke alarms, burglar alarms and now a wet diaper alarm from a 12-year-old electronics whiz.

Jeff Bowles created the device that signals when it detects moisture in a baby's diaper. There are, however, at least two drawbacks: the baby would have to be wired and wet babies usually sound a pretty fair alarm on their own.

But if babysitters and busy moms aren't interested, Bowles, a seventh grader who recently won a superior rating in school for his device, predicts other applications can be found around the house.

"It could be used as a moisture sensor, not so much for babies, but in freezers, down in basements when water gets on the floor," said the youth, who has only tested the device on a doll. "You can get it to turn on anything."

When a diaper gets wet, a clip attached to any edge of the cloth detects moisture and sends an alarm through a wire to a connected electric circuit box.

As the alarm sounds, a recording declares: "This device has detected moisture in baby's diaper. Please remedy immediately. Fresh diapers and talcum can be found on the second shelf in baby's closet to the right. That is all."

A practical problem at home led to the invention.

"The mechanical trigger on our basement sump pump got clogged, so my father and I made an electronic trigger," he said. "It can't clog and it hasn't failed yet. So when the (science) fair came along, I already knew how. So I did that (made an electronic trigger for an alarm)," he explained.

Bowles has been working with simple electronics since he was six. He's had some help from his father, Larry Bowles, a sales executive with a communications company.

Parliamentary reform

It's somehow ironic that a group that does not include any politicians should put forward some of the most interesting proposals in years for reform of our political system.

The group is the Business Council on National Issues, a nonpartisan association of top business executives who spent the past 10 months talking to MPs and senators.

The group's thesis is that the workload and complexity of a modern federal government are constantly increasing while the parliamentary system is not keeping pace with the changes. It states in its report: "Without change, parliament will simply be incapable of dealing effectively with the increasing complexity of modern government."

Observers of the political scene have been aware of the system's weaknesses for years. Parliamentary reformers in the past, however, have more often tinkered with fringe issues.

Doubtless this is the easiest way out for a government of whatever party. The system now ensures that the executive branch (cabinet) has in any majority government a high degree of power and security. Any reforms to make parliament a more effective institution would weaken that executive power.

That weakening of executive power, however, would be more than matched by a strengthening of the legislative power (parliament) and accountability of the cabinet to parliament. At the moment about 225 MPs — all except the cabinet — do not have the opportunity to provide the effective service to their country that their election should ensure.

Government backbenchers have little responsibility except to vote the right way when the need arises. The expertise of opposition members can be used only in digging out scandals concerning the government. All members sit on committees, but the committees usually study only what they are allowed by the cabinet.

To correct some of these weaknesses, the Business Council proposes five changes — revising the committee system, requiring the government to provide more access to information, increasing the accountability of civil servants for their decisions, giving committees more opportunity to consider proposed legislation

Some methods of implementing these changes are also suggested. It is proposed Parliament sit in regular five week cycles, that the government be required to introduce most of its legislation soon after a session begins, that committees be able to investigate whatever they wish.

It wouldn't be easy to put these changes in place and it couldn't be done overnight. However, their implemight mean that the government would be more responsive to the people instead of being "a four-year elected dictatorship," as Liberal candidate Gordon Gibson once described British Columbia's system of government.

The major political parties should accept the Business Council's challenge to say where they stand on questions of parliamentary reform before the federal election on May 22.

Come to terms, Tories

The trend to conduct election campaigns almost entirely on television began in the 1960s with the advent of fast jet aircraft and the development of blanket national television coverage. Now, political campaigns are conducted primarily with television in mind.

The party leaders flit back and forth across the country, aiming to appear in as many "major media markets" as possible in one day. For the television news cameramen they don hard hats and descend into coal mines, discuss fish with fishermen, talk to sawmill hands over the shriek of the gang saws. They make good 60 second news "clips" on the nightly news.

All the federal political parties, even the pure of heart New Democrats, are engaging in the same kind of media campaigning this time. Perhaps in a country so vast and sparsely settled, where most people get their information only from television, it is the one way the different party leaders and their policies can be exposed to the public to maximum effect.

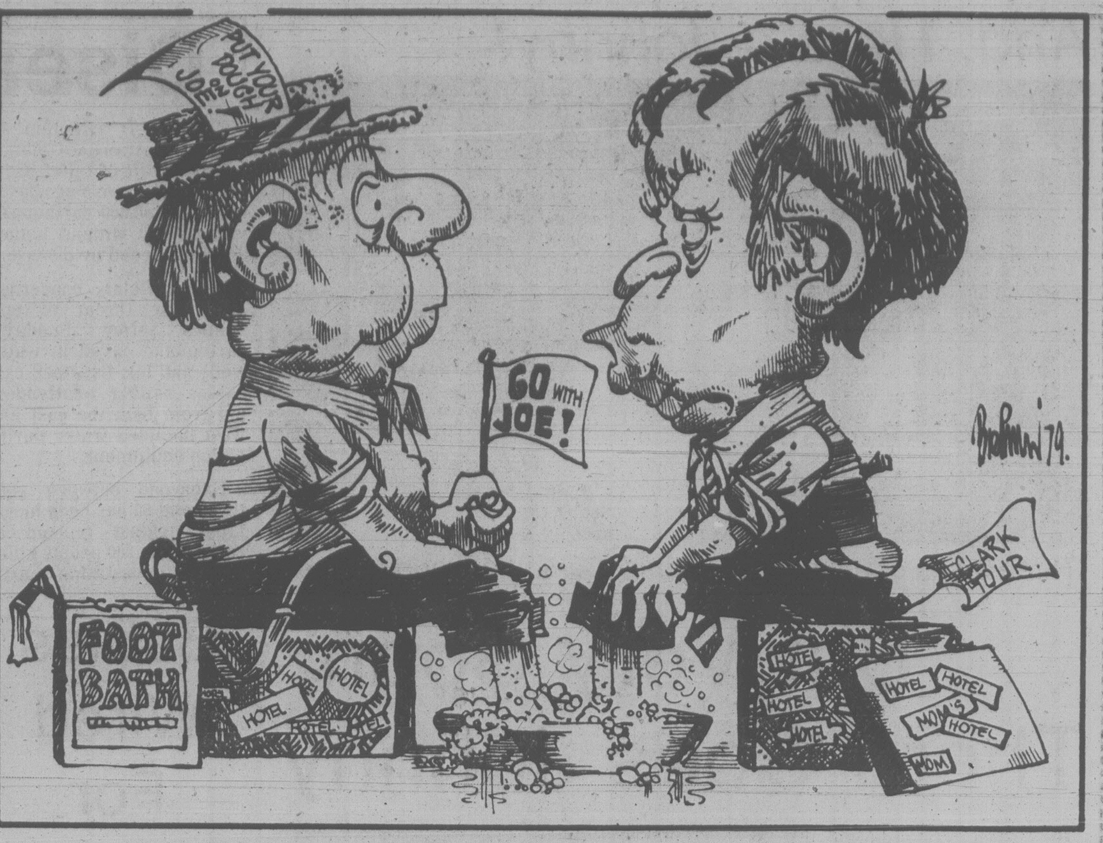
Perhaps. But the public does not learn very much about the party's platform, about what it intends to do if it forms the government, from watching brief blurbs of the prime minister or opposition leader nibbling on a hot dog or strolling up Main Street once a day for the duration of the campaign.

This is why it is so important that the proposed TV debate between the major party leaders actually take place. Prime Minister Trudeau is not enthusiastic about it (he called the last one boring) but he is willing. Joe Clark is the stumbling block. He refuses to appear if NDP leader Ed Broadbent is also a participant.

He claims that the NDP is a minor party with no chance of forming a government, and thus is not entitled to debate with the big boys. It is a shortsighted attitude. The odds are great that the NDP will hold the balance of power after May 22.

Naturally, the voter will want to know as much as possible about the party's position. Circumstances at this election compel a careful scrutiny of the candidates; the voter's choice this time, more than at any other recent election, is of grave importance.

He needs to have as much knowledge as possible to make an informed decision; the stonewalling by Clark and his handlers is obstructing the process. The Tories should quickly come to terms with the television networks so Canadians can examine the alternatives.



". . . now I know what it means to be unemployed and running your butt off after a job . . ."

The Tories write off Quebec

MONTREAL — Joe Clark's Conservatives surrendered Quebec to the Liberals before the federal election campaign even started.

The Tories are just going through the motions in Quebec — trying to avoid a complete shutout in the 75 Quebec ridings to be contested May 22.

The most optimistic forecast from party organizers is for 10 seats. At a hand-picked crowd of 500 enthusiastic Conservative supporters and organizers in Montreal last week, Clark avoided mention of Conservative policies to combat Parti Quebecois threats to separate from Canada.

Conservative strategists have conceded that national unity is Pierre Trudeau's issue and that it would be too risky for their man to make policy pronouncements on the Quebec problem.

No deals for Quebec

"We are conducting a national campaign in the kinds of policies we're putting forward," said Quebec campaign chairman Keith Morgan. "We're not treating Quebec any differently than the other provinces."

The decision to make no special concessions to Quebec is a practical one. Conservative strategists know the election will be won or lost in Ontario and British Columbia where voters could be easily offended by special deals for Quebec.

The new electoral map creates 17 additional ridings in Ontario and the west and only one additional riding in Quebec. The PCs no longer need Quebec seats to form a government.

Yet the Conservative game plan has caused problems for the few Tory candidates in Quebec with any chance of winning.

Peter Blaikie, a prestigious Montreal lawyer who has a good chance of taking Lachine riding from the Liberals, admits he is unhappy with the Conservative strategy in Quebec.

"I would have been very much happier to see a major policy statement from the Conservatives on national unity," he says. "Obviously party strategists haven't taken that approach but it doesn't make my life any easier."

The only message Clark has had for Quebec voters is that they better not be left out because the Conservatives are going to form the next government.

"The Liberals have taken Quebec for granted for too long," he says. "We are asking Quebecers to join with us in forming a strong national government."

But Clark faces the unhappy prospect of forming the next government with almost no representation from Quebec. And while he has promised to appoint Quebec senators to the cabinet if necessary, he would be in a weak position to deal with the Parti Quebecois government if it wins its referendum on sovereignty-association.

"His position is very clear," insists a local Tory. "He is prepared to sit down and negotiate with all 10 premiers. The referendum on sovereignty-association doesn't change that. We would negotiate anything except the break up of the country."

However, the public's perception of Joe Clark remains a problem in Quebec when measured against the charisma of favored son Pierre Trudeau.

"That was my biggest problem last October," says PC candidate Bernard Finestone who made an unsuccessful run in last fall's byelection in Westmount. "But Clark is starting to come through."

Polling only 12%

That was difficult to observe as Clark glad-handed last week in a suburban Montreal shopping mall. He got a cool reception and the only enthusiasm was generated by a hired band and a small Conservative crowd.

The Conservatives won three Quebec seats and received only 20 per cent of the popular vote in 1974. The most recent Quebec opinion poll gave the party only 12.4 per cent of the vote compared to 45.1 per cent for the Liberals.

But Conservative strategists point to a handful of ridings where they can make gains this time: Gaspe, Chicoutimi, Sheffard, St. Hyacinthe, Lachine, Berthier-Maskinonge and St. Marie.

Delightful diary

I should be remiss if I refrained with a few humble comments to voice my gut feeling upon reading Barbara McLintock's Election Diary '79, (Times, April 10) noting "He still has a certain magic," appraising our prime minister's brief visit to Victoria on April 6.

With most admirable objectivity and gift of word choice she reported the story with spirited human interest as well deliciously embroidering it with some touching minor humor so sorely needed in this droll Pacific-lapped metropolis.

Briefly her story brought to mind (it being so near to Easter week) an historical event of many centuries ago. You guessed it. With ant-like marching in uniformity the centurions of that long ago took their victim — escorting in prideful stride as the mobs of ambivalent emotions spat, reviled, slandered, cast undefined doubts, mocked, cursed, denied, lashed one lone figure on the way to a misunderstood end in spirit and flesh.

May I add that the delightful "diary" was a refreshing contrast and follow-up to below-the-belt slams, slanting editorials, columns, letters in some sister publications.

Somehow my appetite suddenly flagged for Government Street chocolates. Funny how civil courtesy and manners of some retired cradle rockers, who might tenaciously adhere to symbolic consciences of ancient pentecosty, suddenly deteriorate when a parallel episode surfaces momentarily for current history making. Foulmouthing the meanest among us is still boorish, negative spiritually, quite uncivilized in any open air arenas. Amen. — M. Anderson, 640 Dallas Road.

Mail by snail

Maybe there is an explanation of postal delay in the following:

A letter from a relative in Nanaimo, 90 miles north of us, was postmarked March 28. I received it today, April 4, in Victoria. How could it possibly take one week to travel 90 miles?

The above experience makes me furious to be paying 17 cents for inefficiency. — M. C. Scaife, 103-505 Quadra Street.

True conservatives

One thing that the near catastrophe at Three Mile Island demonstrates is the complete moral bankruptcy of the political right in North America. Whether they call themselves Socred, Conservative, Republican or large L Liberal, the reaction of these forces to the disaster shows how peculiar indeed, these days, are the attitudes of many who call themselves conservative. Logically, you would expect such people to be most alarmed by the threat posed by this rogue technology. A true conservative, one would expect, would be most sensitive to the environmental dangers and would be very upset by the threat that the nuclear industry poses to an older and safer order. But, alas, the opposite is true. In America, leading conservative journalists like George Will and Jack Kilpatrick have already published disgracefully inflammatory articles in defence of the industry.

The answer would seem to be that many people who call themselves "conservative" nowadays are not really conservative at all. In reality, they are unrepentant radicals who would completely overturn the foundations that our society has built in the past half centry. The "law and order" freaks would institute a repression which borders on totalitarianism. In areas of social policy, the compassion built into our institutions over recent decades would be replaced with welfare-bashing and the bottom line. In education, sound progressive policies would be overturned to be replaced with policies of ultra-rightist fanaticism. Human rights has become a sick locker room joke for the very people appointed to enhance those rights. In foreign policy, gung-ho attitudes are put forward which will surely lead to Armageddon.

The Three Mile Island disaster then has had at least two very positive effects. First it has aroused the concern of millions of people in North America to the grave dangers presented by this technology. And second, it has revealed to many the grave flaws in "conservative" thought. Faced with what passes for conservative philosophers and opinion makers in this sad area, Edmund Burke must be rolling over in his grave. — James N. Knechtel, 2067 Lorne Terrace.

No longer required

I arrived home yesterday, just 31 days prior to the provincial election, to find the latest edition of the B.C. Government News littering my doorstep. A brief perusal was enough to assure me that this "news" was nothing more than well-planned, well-timed Social Credit campaign propaganda. Campaign literature in itself does not disturb me. However, when this literature is published and distributed at the expense of the taxpayers of this province, my blood starts to boil. I, for one, did not agree to make any contribution to the Socreds' campaign.

This is just another example of Bill Bennett's contemptuous treatment of B.C. taxpayers. Five "free" shares, which will end up costing taxpayers in excess of $20 million, is yet another. Does Mr. Bennett really believe we are all so gullible that we willingly approve the expenditure of public funds for his political haymaking?

What can the taxpayers do? Send Mr. Bennett our bill? I suppose we could all send our copies of B.C. Government News to the Social Credit party and demand a refund.

I am sick and tired of this unnecessary and scandalous misspending of public funds. And come election day, I can assure the Socred party that they will find their services will no longer be required. — C. Callander, 1005-409 McKenzie Avenue.

Dark age waiting

In 1955 public expenditure in Britain as a proportion of the gross national product was just over 40 per cent. By 1975, 20 years later, it has risen to nearly 60 per cent.

The trade unions play an important part. In Britain, for instance, the unions can rightly claim that capitalism is inefficient, because they make sure it is inefficient. Ford workers in Britain, using exactly the same assembly line machinery as in West Germany, produce between 20 per cent and 50 per cent fewer automobiles.

I myself think that capitalism will survive, because of its enormous intrinsic virtues as a system for generating wealth and promoting freedom. But those who man and control it must stop apologizing and go onto the ideological offensive. They must show to ordinary people that both the communist world, and the third world, are parasitical upon industrial capitalism for their growth technology; that without capitalism, the 200 years of unprecedented growth which have created the modern world, would gradually come to an end. We would have slow growth then no growth, then minus growth; and then the Malthusian catastrophe.

In short, those who wish to maintain the capitalist system must endeavor to teach the world a little history and remind it, and especially the young, that, though man's achievements are great, they are never as solid as they look. If man makes the wrong choice, there is always another dark age waiting for him round the corner of time. — A. Bennett, 3595 Beach Drive.

Out to vote

The deadline to register for the provincial election has passed and in spite of Yvonne Cocke's plea to extend it, Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis would not because he could not. As past president of the provincial NDP. Mrs. Cocke should know it would take the approval of the legislature to do so, and the House was disolved when the election was called. During the Social Credit tenure we had a provincial enumeration and Mr. Curtis estimated 90 per cent of B.C.'s eligible voters were already on the list. My fervent hope is that people will be as concerned about getting out and exercising their vote. as they were about getting on the list. — Isobel Ripley, 4402 Wilkinson Road.

Wrong Carfra

In your Times of April 7 you did a write-up of Sleeping Beauty. My mother, Pat Carfra, is playing the Red Witch, but you made a mistake. In the Belfry's production of Joe Egg, I played "Joe Egg", not my mom. — Jill Carfra, (age 10).

Sun spots

Barbara McLintock must have been looking under tables, searching for a man on his hands and knees, wearing blinders, examining the floor with a magnifying glass, for hairs to split. The disillusioned Socred, (Election Diary, April 14), thought, in 1975, that if B.C. was run on business logic and sound administration, the economic bust would be converted into a hey presto boom. While being saturated by 150 years of logical, administratively sound businesses, periodically being decimated by the cyclical economics of the international wages, money, profit system.

As Trudeau's authoritarian response to heckling Victoria postal workers helped to reveal, governments are co-ordinator for all the business in the land and as such, must be administratively tuned to their masters' collective command. With another factor: political power, being the organized ability of one class to exploit another. Governments must centralize the persuasive propaganda and nurture the state military coercion that gives petty slave drivers the assurance of obedience in meaningless production and minimizing the static of wage protection by the producers, thereby greasing the wheels of proper profitability, and making "politics" in government unavoidable.

But since the system runs governments as much as governments run the system, they have little more control over economic blizzards than they have sun spots. The answer to semi-anarchy is common ownership and democratic control by humanity.

In the meantime, the hero of the piece appears to be more stunned by the blow then enlightened. Rather than search for further flotsam, he should raise his gaze. If all he sees is the bottom side of a table top, at least it would be a start. — J. G. Jenkins, 1090 Lodge Avenue.

Shipbuilding

Regarding the letter, Ship Via, Times, April 16: This does not seem to be an important topic at the present time inasmuch as so far as I am aware, Canada has no plans to enter the deepwater shipping scene, in its depressed state.

To infer that Canadian shipyards are operating with 1940 equipment is to admit an abysmal lack of knowledge of the industry. The yard at Sorel, Quebec was rebuilt with the aid of and along the lines of the Arendal ship factory some years ago. The yards at North Vancouver, Collingwood, Port Weller, Lauzon, Halifax and Saint John have all been modernized so as to be unrecognizable from a 1940 era shipyard. I purposely ignore the local yard as it does not really qualify as a large shipyard, but even so, it has constructed some notable vessels since 1940, besides undertaking some of the more interesting repair jobs and conversions due to its proximity to the big Esquimalt graving dock.

Boulter should take an excursion to the Esquimalt drydock when one of the big Sea-Land ships is in for its annual refit and see what is accomplished in a week! 1940 equipment indeed!

Canada does not have a merchant marine because she does not have a seafaring background. She has had two merchant marines and on each occasion it was proven that Canadians, on the whole, are landsmen. I would wager that, if a large ocean going vessel was in the port of Vancouver, flying the Canadian flag and endeavoring to recruit a full complement of officers and crewmen, this evolution would only be carried out with the greatest difficulty, if at all.

Canada is not going to provide massive infusions of government money to create a merchant marine, just so the shipyards can build ships. In all fairness to the shipyards though, I cannot think of a single country in the world today where the shipbuilding industry is not assisted by the state, if not by outright subsidy, then by tax incentives or other means.

The governments of Canada at both the federal and provincial levels are not dedicated to the building of a strong industrial nation; for 112 years they have concentrated upon the give-away of our natural resources. I do not feel as though I am an alarmist, the record speaks for itself! — W. A. Drummond, Duncan.

Wrong solution

Your letters column of April 12, under the title No Help for Renters, brings to your readers' attention the renters' low priority in the Socred budget. The writer goes on suggesting that, to remedy the situation, one should vote against our elected MLAs and Finance Minister Evan Wolfe.

While I do agree that renters have been discriminated against, I do not share the writer's solution to the problem. In the first place, what guarantee do we have that renters will fare better under an NDP administration?

Next, it is probable that, because of the labor-NDP alliance, wage earners will ask for a substantial reward which will be translated in higher prices that always accompany or immediately follow labor's big increases and fringe benefits.

Thus, the few hypothetical dollars renters may be getting will go fast to the supermarkets. For renters on fixed income and not on SAFER, this will spell disaster.

Add to this the flight of capital to other Canadian provinces if the succession tax is reinstated. Homeowners and people having some assets which they plan to leave to their children and grandchildren do pay taxes and buy goods and services.

Finally, a high wages system as it already exists in B.C. even compared with Alberta, will scare off would-be investors, thus making the unemployment problem more, not less acute.

I do offer another solution to the renters' problem (as a matter of fact, I had already taken a step in that direction): Write to our minister of finance and ask for justice. A budget is not a sacred document which cannot be revised, altered and corrected. To make the point even stronger, I am sending a copy of this letter to Evan Wolfe, together with the editorial correspondence that appeared in your newspaper. — E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

That leaves Ed

It is said that the current federal election will cost the taxpayers a minimum of $52 million, which makes one wonder if any result achieved could possibly be worth it. For many years I have been following Canadian elections but never before has the outlook appeared to be so bleak and so dismal for our people.

The PM is a very clever man and when he wants to, can be charming and eloquent as well. When he talks about how essential it is to maintain national unity, the need for a strong central government and someone to speak up for Canada as a whole, Mr. Trudeau can be quite impressive. That is, just as long as one can forget that it has all been heard before in three previous contests and that during his term of office things have gone from bad to worse, not only as to unity, but as to the economy, inflation, unemployment and the general competence of the government. Coupled with all that is a cynicism and arrogance unequalled in our history.

Having followed Joe Clark's speeches with care, both in and out of Parliament, I confess to not knowing what his policies are on most subjects. Probably that is because he does not seem to know himself. On the one issue on which he has spoken out most plainly, he is dead wrong, for he wants to turn over to the provinces more powers which would make it still more difficult for the federal authorities to function. He seems to have completely swallowed the ideas of Lougheed, Bennett and others and his slogan could easily be "All power to the provinces". That would spell the end of Canada as a united nation, if indeed the point of no return may not have been already reached.

That leaves Ed Broadbent, easily the most sensible and competent of the three, but with no chance at all of becoming PM at this time. He may end up with the balance of power but that has its dangers, if not for the country, certainly for his own party, as David Lewis found out to his sorrow in 1974.

It distresses me to have to be so pessimistic but facts are facts and have to be faced. Our only hope is that someday people will put aside greed (are we not all guilty?) and decide to live and work together in harmony and with greater emphasis on the general good. — F. L. P. Anderson, 409-2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

What is socialism?

As the provincial election campaign progresses, we will be hearing more and more about the virtuous free enterprise system and that we must avoid, at our peril, electing those terrible NDP socialists. Perhaps it is timely for us to take a look at the B.C. brand of free enterprise and what true democratic socialism or social democracy means, not what the Socreds say they mean.

Free enterprise as practised by many is to make a profit now, with little or no regard for tomorrow or for thse who come after us. Example:

☐ The Socreds' opposition to the agricultural land reserve and their efforts to mitigate its effectiveness so that developers and speculators can exploit irreplaceable farmland. MLA Lyle Kahl has spoken out, obediently, in favor of turning agricultural land over to developers and speculators for their use and profit.

☐ Witness also the selling of valuable farmland by the premier of British Columbia to Marathon Realty (owned by Canadian Pacific Investments) for a shopping centre in Kelowna a few years ago. I suppose Bennett hoped no one would notice that when he was spouting hypocritical platitudes about B.C. not being for sale especially to CPI.

Now, what about this democratic socialism, what does it stand for?

The production and distribution of goods and services that is directed to meeting the social and individual needs of people and not for profit.

Freedom from exploitation by powerful national and multinational corporations. Witness recent big company takeovers. It that for our benefit?

Freedom for the small businessman to compete fairly in the marketplace.

Freedom to choose who will develop resources for people, in this province, in this country, and some day, in the world.

Freedom for the individual to develop within a truly co-operative society.

No wonder the Socreds exhort us to shun democratic socialism and for us to retain their brand of selfish free enterprise. — W. Stott, 258 Portsmouth Drive.

PRESIDENT of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, Pat Brady, told a press conference in Vancouver last week that the BCTF would take a 'non-partisan approach' in provincial election campaign.

By JOHN CLARKE
The Globe and Mail

VANCOUVER — British Columbia's teachers are just about ready to take another bite out of the apple. Depending on the size of the bite, they could become a significant factor in the choice of the next provincial government.

In the late sixties, when they became concerned about the education policies of the Social Credit government of the late W.A.C. Bennett, they ran a political campaign, their first real foray into the political jungle, under the symbol of an apple with a bite out of it. It had, of course, overtones of the Garden of Eden, with the apple representing knowledge and the bite the quest for it.

It was not a notably successful campaign and Mr. Bennett wasn't swayed. But it awakened the political conscience of the teachers and in the 1972 general election they campaigned more vigorously for the Socreds' defeat. That campaign was probably the biggest single factor in the New Democrats' first-ever election victory in British Columbia.

Before 1972, teachers had moved steadily toward political activism. Radical elements had, in fact, gained control of the B.C. Teachers Federation. They were interested not just in working for better salaries and conditions for teachers, but in turning the classroom into an arena for political and social change.

Alienate public

This "new" radicalism wasn't universally approved even among the teachers. Older members of the profession worried their genuine concern for the state of the school system under the old Socreds had been devalued into a form of political activism. But at the same time, studies had begun to show an alarming decline in educational standards, particularly among graduates of the school system moving on to university. These reports, coupled with the radical takeover of the BCTF, turned the public against the teachers.

The New Democrats were seen as friends of the teachers and voter unease about education and the leftward swing of the teachers is now thought to have been one of the issues leading to NDP defeat in 1975.

The "new" Socreds under Mr. Bennett's son Bill cleverly exploited these public misgivings by forcing the teachers on the defensive. To the chagrin of the teachers they've opened up public funding for private schools. They've sponsored a back-to-the-basics campaign with emphasis on the three Rs, under which, teachers believe, progressive education may be hurt. And they've stalled progress toward reduction of the pupil-teacher ratio, one of the BCTF's primary objectives.

Under attack

The teachers clearly are under attack. They believe that the last two years, during which they tinkered with a moderate approach to government in the hope of co-operation, have been a waste of time. They have just elected a slate of militant officers to lead the BCTF and will actively confront the government in the coming election. They say they won't be endorsing any party but will be trying to win the public back to their side which, they say, is the side of education.

But just as the bite out of the apple signified the end of innocence, the teachers would be naive to think their campaign won't favor the New Democrats. Although Al Blakey, the militant new BCTF president-elect, says no party "is to be depended upon in government," there's no question they'll get more sympathy from the NDP than the Socreds. The teachers know this and so their campaign "on behalf of education" is likely to end up being a campaign for the NDP, which is where the teachers were in 1972 after taking that first bite from the apple.

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM

VANCOUVER — Nothing could more illustrate the strange isolation of the Liberal party in the Canada of April 1979 than the confusion in the mind of Senator Al Graham.

The good senator, an honest, sincere man from Nova Scotia who has enough children to stock a baseball team, has become so enamored of the outdated Liberal line that he struck the national unity theme in almost desperate key this week, warning on TV that if we do not pay attention to the Quebec problem then B.C. and Alberta sure as the Easter bunny would fall into the lap of the Yanks.

Such desperate piffle assumes the level of near-lunacy to the tired traveller who completes his sea-to-shining-sea journey by falling gratefully among the japanese cherry blossoms and rich green grass of The Village on the Edge of the Rain Forest.

For a man who has not seen color — save gun-grey foliage, naked branches and dirty snow in driving in eight provinces — British Columbia seems a hothouse laboratory where nature is force-fed three months in advance of the rest of our electoral world.

It is also a world content in its isolation, willingly spelled parochialism, sucking blissfully on its security-blanket of mountains.

The thought that B.C. (surely Senator Graham, national president of Liberal party, is not really this far out of touch?) is interested in the Americans is as ludicrous as to expect it to be interested in the Canadians.

British Columbians, it comes anew to someone on the last leg of a rent-a-car view of the realm, really are — and revel — in the state of innocence of which they are so often accused. With the tennis season in full spate and sailing well established, the contempt for introducing outside forces is palpable.

A federal election on May 22 to choose a government in some far-off Patagonia is bother enough. And if the Parti Quebecois did succeed in ripping the country apart, it would be Ontario that would most suffer — the West secure in its new resource base.

Moving west in the autumn of 1976, the surprised observer found a more calm, more mature attitude the further one got from Quebec. In eccentric B.C. — linked in psychic ways with maverick Quebec — there was an almost naive rush to make up for lost time: suggestions of student exchanges, panels, speakers, open letters — all the rush of emotion that the Levesque loyalists found so pitiful and tardy.

In B.C., of all places, there were more "unity groups" — dedicated to instanteous patriotism — than in any other province. They are now as dead as the prairie grass beneath the wheels of the this Tilden tourist. When Mr. Trudeau, a few days ago before an outdoor crowd in Centennial Square in the monarchist mausoleum called Victoria, tried to raise the cry of national unity his audience yawned him onto another subject.

This city, where hot-liners three years ago made their light-weight reputations by collecting signatures in supermarkets against the opening of a French-language TV station and where certain Liberal strategists a year ago seriously pushed the idea of either Mr. Trudeau or Jean-Luc Pepin running in the plush Vancouver-Quadra riding so as to demonstrate our bilingual bonds, today quite obviously and sadly displays the "fatigue" with Quebec that the rueful Liberal worker talks about.

There is the sense that the fate of Quebec, within or without Canada, will be decided within the borders of Quebec and all the earnest lawyers and stockbrokers and eductors who so eagerly flung their passion into the well-meaning unity groups feel slightly sheepish about the whole matter. Quietly proud that they tried, but resigned to whatever result, resigned to the fact they can have little bearing on the conclusion.

There is little enthusiasm for Joe Clark, but knowledge that the Liberals, who won eight of the 23 seats in 1974 because of fear of Mr. Stanfield's wage controls, are going to be punished for their betrayal on that issue.

★ ★ ★

The NDP, who fell from 12 to two seats because of that fear, are sure to leap back close to 10 as redistribution now gives B.C. 28 seats. The rest will reluctantly go to the unexciting Clark.

The B.C. of the blossoms, which was poised to give Mr. Trudeau the axe in 1974 but delayed the execution, is poised to finish him off this time.

Before the Judge

Allan levied fines of $100 on each of four counts under the Public Hall and Theatre Safety Regulations of the Fire Servies Act.

Defence lawyer Paul Scambler entered the guilty pleas on behalf of the hotel and crown counsel Richard Law withdrew four other counts as well as all charges against managing-director John Olson and employees Walter DeHogg and Lyle Roblin.

The firm pleaded guilty to two counts of failing to improve an entranceway at the disco-cabaret The Sting and two counts of allowing persons to obstruct the entrace stairway to The Sting on Feb. 17 and March 2. Withdrawn were charges that the hotel admitted more persons to the disco than permitted and allowing persons to obstruct the entrance stairway to The Old Forge cabaret.

Law said 1975 plans approved by the fire marshal inspectors called for covered double-opening doors between the two cabarets. On the two dates charged, sliding doors were used to control passage between the two clubs.

In connection with the second two counts, Law said that on the particular dates, some 50-odd persons were allowed to wait to get into the disco on the stairway, constituting a fire hazard.

Scambler said the adjustments have been made and that the two entrances mentioned were not the only means of getting in or out of the disco. He said there were emergency exits above and beyond those entrances.

Regarding the dropped charges of having too many patrons in the club, Scambler said the club employed a person who had a mechanical counting device and stopped people from entering when the limit of 160 was reached.

Scambler also said people waiting to get into The Sting now congregate in the lobby area and not on the stairway. eral persons in the crowd

Allan said he had read stories of terrible tragedies concerning fires in cabarets and said the matter must be taken seriously as far as the public was concerned.

Judge Fred Green gave conditional discharges to a 21-year-old man who pleaded guilty to an indecent act and mischief causing wilful damage.

Bruce Allvin Harder, formerly of HMCS Gatineau, was also placed on six months probation and ordered to seek counselling as directed by his probation officer.

The indecent act alleged was observing the private act of a female person in the women's washroom at the Hot City Disco on Feb. 2.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told the court the incident occurred at about 1 a.m. when a female employee using the washroom heard a noise, looked up and saw a body fall halfway through the ceiling.

She went to the manager of the disco, described the clothing, and a person fitting the description came out of the men's washroom minutes later and was apprehended by the manager.

Court was informed Harder told Victoria city police he went into the men's room, climbed up into a false ceiling, crawled over to the women's side and lifted a tile to observe.

"That's how I get my jollies," Harder allegedly told officers.

Green also ordered Harder to make restitution in the amount of $60 for damage to the ceiling.

A 15-day jail sentence was handed an 18-year-old Victoria youth who pleaded guilty to mischief causing wilful damage.

Kenneth Douglas Strong, of 1017 Burdett, was also told by Allan, "You're lucky to get off with 15 days."

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan informed the court Strong was evicted from the King's Hotel beer parlor about 1 a.m. Thursday and was upset to the point of kicking in a window at Field's Shoe Store, 1300 Government.

Victoria city police arrived and a crowd had gathered, Mulligan continued, and when Strong was questioned by police, denied an knowledge. However, several persons in the crowd pointed to Strong as the person who did the kicking and he later admitted the offence.

Mulligan said the window was valued at $200 and there was further damage to two pairs of shoes valued at $100 in the display window.

Strong was convicted of breaking and entering with intent June 13, 1978, and was still on probation, Mulligan added.

Marijuana Jury Kept Out Again

For the second consecutive day, the jury in the conspiracy to import marijuana trial in county court was excused while lawyers for the prosecution and defence argued matters in its absence.

The jury has heard only one witness, for a few minutes, this week but was told Thursday to come back to court at 10 a.m. today.

Five men are standing trial in what the prosecution has alleged was a scheme to bring 13.63 tons of marijuana said to have a wholesale value in the area of $20 million into B.C. from Colombia.

Matters heard in the absence of the jury cannot be published until they are placed before the jury.

City Seeks Beggar Broom

City council's legal committee wants to sweep Victoria's street clean of beggars but doesn't want to brush off musicians or vendors with the same broom.

Enter city solicitor Jacob de Villiers, the man council always turns to when it has a tricky legal problem.

De Villiers was asked Thursday to prepare a report on the possibility of enacting an anti-begging bylaw.

The report was requested by Ald. Murray Glazier who said the beggars are getting out of hand.

Glazier, who's just returned from a two-week holiday in Mexico, said he came across only one beggar in his travels in that country.

"Let's have a bylaw prohibiting begging," said Glazier.

"Are street musicians begging?" asked Ald. Robin Blencoe.

"I'm talking about the people who are downright disgusting," said Glazier.

"It's the people who start shouting at you after you say you don't have any change," chipped in Ald. Bill Tindall.

Blencoe said he could support Glazier's motion but only if de Villiers would indicate he thought he could draft a bylaw to deal with the problem.

De Villiers said he'd never give such a commitment for any bylaw. He also pointed out that police already have the power to arrest beggars who are causing a nuisance or a disturbance.

But Glazier said the city could use a specific bylaw to deal with the problem, so de Villiers was instructed to report to council on how the matter might be handled.

Alert Bay Nurses Want Lawyer

ALERT BAY (CP) — An inquest into the death of an 11-year-old Indian girl was adjourned indefinitely Thursday after nine nurses called to testify demanded they be represented by a lawyer.

Dr. Glen McDonald of Vancouver, B.C.'s supervising coroner, did not set a date for resumption of the inquest into the death of Renee Smith, who died in hospital of a ruptured appendix Jan. 22.

The girl's uncle, Leonard Smith, testified Wednesday that five days before she died Renee was given pain-killing pills and told to go home by a hospital nurse, even though she was barely able to walk because of abdominal pain.

Twenty-eight witnesses had been scheduled to testify. However, when McDonald called the adjournment Thursday night, he said additional witnesses will be subpoenaed because the subject calls for a full investigation.

Alert Bay, on Cormorant Island off northeastern Vancouver Island, has a population of 1,800, about 1,000 of them Indians.

The inquest was ordered by William Deadman, Alert Bay coroner, after a 150-name petition, demanding an inquest and signed by white and Indian residents, was sent to Attorney-General Garde Gardom.

A petition also was sent to Health Minister Bob McClelland, asking the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons to investigate health care in the community. It has agreed to do so.

Vera Robinson, the new Indian health nurse for the area, said recently that she wants to find out why 44 Indians have died during the last two years, while only one non-Indian has died.

She said she is concerned about the high incidence of tuberculosis and high mercury readings among the native people.

Nurse Ursula Schneider, who demanded and received protection of the Canada and B.C. Evidence Acts before reluctantly agreeing to testify Thursday, said that Dr. Jack Pickup might have told her that Reneé was a poor surgical risk in discussion Jan. 18, the day the child was admitted to hospital.

The child died without undergoing surgery.

Nurse Elizabeth Abamonge testified she was concerned about the absence of a doctor's diagnosis in the case.

She said she saw Renee at the hospital Jan. 17, but attempts to conduct an examination were hampered by the girl's refusal to lie down or roll up her sleeve so her blood pressure could be checked.

Because she feared for the girl's health, Abamonge said, she contacted Pickup, the girl's physician and the community's only resident doctor, and was told to admit her for observation.

"She refused to stay in the hospital and pain killers were prescribed by the doctor," said Abamonge.

McDonald said he wants to know who is running the hospital.

"Is it an 11-year-old girl who says she won't be admitted after a doctor has ordered her to be admitted? Is it an uncle? Or is it a doctor?

Smith testified Thursday he could not remember the nurse saying that Renee should be admitted following the brief examination Jan. 17.

He said when he took her to hospital Jan. 18, Pickup said she would have to undergo surgery immediately, "but I said I could not give the authorization before checking with her vacationing parents."

Smith admitted the signature on a consent for an operation form was his, but said he had not known he was signing such a form.

Charlottes' Row Pushed to Courts

Native Haida chief Nathan Young, Indian carver Gary Edenshaw and trapper Glenn Naylor teamed up Thursday to file a petition with the B.C. Supreme Court.

The petition asks that the ministry of forests be instructed to provide information on the tree farm licence (TFL) that Rayonier Canada (B.C.) Ltd. is being awarded to log the area. It also requests for an extension of the deadline for issuance of the TFL.

The three men were in court earlier this year when the Islands Protection Society initiated an unsuccesful Supreme Court action to try and force Waterland to hold a public hearing on the issue.

In a January ruling the court held that Waterland was under no obligation to hold a public hearing, but it also stated that the minister was expected to act fairly in the matter.

A spokesman for the trio said it is hoped the Supreme Court will agree that Waterland has been acting unfairly in overseeing the Moresby dispute.

A court date has been set for April 27 in Vancouver.

In a press release Thursday Young said all his letters to Waterland since the January court decision have gone unanswered.

The other men have also failed in attempts to correspond with the minister's office.

Retired City Man Named for Nanaimo

NANAIMO (CP) — A 70-year-old retired aircraft worker has been appointed by Progressive Conservative leader Vic Stephens to represent the party in the Nanaimo riding in the May 10 election.

James Alcorn, a retired aircraft pattern maker from Victoria, was appointed after the constituency association failed to nominate a candidate.

Earlier, a party official here said Alcorn had been persuaded not to run because of his age and condition. Alcorn has suffered a heart attack.

But Alcorn denied he was not running and said his doctor has given him a clean bill of health.

"I will die fighting, but I can assure you it won't be in the next 10 years," he said. "My party and its leader Vic Stephens are fully supporting me."

Alcorn also said that Nanaimo is another riding in which the federal Conservatives and the provincial Social Credit party had made a deal not to run Conservative candidates in the provincial election.

Doug McBride, president of the Nanaimo Social Credit Association, said he is not aware of any such arrangement.

McBride said the issue is which man can best represent Nanaimo citizens in Victoria.

New Democrat Dave Stupich represented the riding in the last house.

All-Candidate Meeting

An all-candidates meeting for the provincial riding of Esquimalt-Port Renfrew will be held at 7 p.m. Monday in the dining hall of the Sooke Community Association building on Eustace Street in Sooke.

Wayne Williams, who is running as an independent in the riding, and Doug Christie, founder of the Committee for Western Independence, who is also a candidate, have issued a challenge to the other candidates to appear at a public meeting at 2 p.m. Sunday in the Luxton Hall in the Happy Valley area.

The other candidates are incumbent Social Credit MLA Lyle Kahl, New Democratic Party candidate Frank Mitchell and Progressive Conservative candidate Bill Langlois.

Environmentalist Seeking Cash

The provincial environment ministry has awarded $2,100 to the Greater Victoria Environmental Centre but it isn't enough to cover the cost of running an office, vice-president Nancy Turner said today.

But she said proposals to keep the centre operating will be made at the annual meeting Thursday, April 26, at 7:30 p.m. in room 167, Elliot Building, University of Victoria.

"Directors feel strongly about keeping the centre operating," she added.

The centre was established in Victoria to provide information to environmental organizations through its library and a panel of university trained experts.

Oak Bay Exchanges 592 and 598 go electronic.

On April 21, 1979 Oak Bay telephone exchanges 592 & 598, will be converted to the new electronic system which B.C. Tel is busy advancing throughout the province.

The whole idea is not only highly sophisticated but a significant step towards bringing you more efficient service.

Already 24 exchanges in B.C. have been converted to take advantage of the new electronic system. Seven more switchovers are planned for 1979 and a further eight are planned for 1980.

By 1981, nearly half the phones in B.C. will be electronically controlled. By 1985, three-quarters of the phones will be converted.

As you would expect, a conversion such as this is a huge project. The benefits, especially in the long run, are equally substantial.

Cost control - and its ultimate effect on the rates you will pay for phone service in the future - is the major benefit to telephone customers. For many reasons - among them maintenance efficiency, space-saving, operational reliability - electronic switching technology helps us meet customer needs effectively and, at the same time, to hold the line as best we can against the costs of providing service to you.

B.C. Fed Rallies A Flam: Bennett

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Federation of Labor abused the political rights of its members by holding pro-New Democratic Party rallies around the province this winter, Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday.

Speaking at a nomination meeting where two of his cabinet ministers were chosen by acclamation to run again, Bennett said not all union members would agree with the political stand that federation leaders chose to take.

"They went around running NDP rallies with the money put up by the hard-working people of B.C., some of the members of our party, some of them running for our party," he told a standing-room-only crowd of about 550 in a hotel meeting room.

The federation held rallies to protest against expansion of essential service legislation, and its leaders urged members to rally behind the NDP in the next election.

Bennett has made federation president Jim Kinnaird a constant target during the campaign and stressed that his party is made up a wide range of people, including many union members.

Former attorney-general Les Petersen, who was chairman of the nomination proceedings at the Little Mountain riding meeting, picked up the theme.

"I think we have more union members running for us this election than the NDP," said Petersen, pointing a finger at Finance Minister Evan Wolfe, one of the Socred candidates in the two-member riding, who is "a paid-up member of the musicians union."

The NDP has labelled Social Credit as a coalition of car dealers and millionaires, but no one mentioned that Thursday — Wolfe was once a car dealer, and both he and fellow candidate Grace McCarthy, now minister of human resources, are wealthy enough to qualify as millionaires.

Bennett drew laughs with a swipe at an NDP nominating meeting controversy in Esquimalt where a protest developed after the two candidates tied and the chairman cast the deciding vote. The loser's workers alleged that the chairman had voted twice but the protest was disallowed, Bennett said.

"They said it was all right to vote twice at an NDP nominating meeting. Well you've got a worry because if they vote twice at a nominating meeting, how many times are they going to vote when they get to the ballot boxes?"

The meeting featured a Dixieland band, buttons, boaters, Bill Bennett T-shirts and more hoopla than the premier encountered earlier in the week on a swing through four southern Interior ridings, including his own.

At a Chamber of Commerce luncheon in Penticton earlier in the day, Bennett pointed out the difficulty of solving B.C.'s unemployment problem by saying the only sure-fire solution would be a gate at Rogers Pass to keep other Canadians out of the province.

Bennett was to fly to Castlegar this morning for a two-day swing through several Kootenay communities.

Lovey-Dovey SC Image Will Fade, Barrett Warns

VERNON (CP) — The Social Credit government has been attacking groups of citizens for 3½ years and now is making love to them for 38 days, says New Democrat leader Dave Barrett.

This doesn't make sense, he told more than 1,000 persons at a public meeting Thursday night.

Barrett also said Premier Bill Bennett is being deliberately slanderous when he calls the NDP national socialists.

His comment came after a woman asked him if it wasn't true that Russia started with socialism.

"The first people the Communists shoot are social democrats," Barrett said.

During his speech to a largely partisan crowd, Barrett continued to attack the Social Credit party, charging its budget ceilings have jeopardized health care and its union-bashing amounts to dividing citizens for political gain.

"They were not elected to rule, they were elected to serve and they have yet to learn that lesson," he said.

Again referring to Bennett's statement Barrett could lose his Vancouver East seat in the May 10 provincial election, the NDP leader said: "The way things are going in the Okanagan Valley he (Bennett) will have a better chance of getting elected in Vancouver East."

Barrett said there always has been a coalition in B.C. to protect special interest groups. Liberals jumped into bed with Social Credit, Conservatives jumped into bed with Social Credit, "and to this day we don't know who is doing what to whom."

Commenting on Bennett's statement that the only way to stop unemployment is to halt migration from other provinces, Barrett said statistics show the influx has decreased under the Social Credit administration.

Barrett expanded on his promise that an NDP government would provide increased aid to small business through decentralization of the B.C. Development Corp. and increased funding to those businesses.

He said B.C. businesses will be given preference in all purchases by government departments up to a 10 per cent ceiling over the next lowest bids.

He said the NDP would reintroduce succession duties but there would be a basic exemption of $2 million, half for property and half for cash and personal possessions.

But he said this duty would not be levied on farms handed down through families.

Today Barrett will visit Revelstoke and Salmon Arm.

NDP 'Jeopardizes Billions'

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Forests Minister Tom Waterland says a New Democratic Party victory in the May 10 election would jeopardize billions of dollars of investment slated for B.C.'s resource industries.

Waterland told about 80 people at a Social Credit meeting that investors will keep a tighter grip on their wallet if the NDP forms the next government.

He said B.C. will be the envy of the world in the 1980s and voters should make sure they don't elect a government that would take that opportunity away from them.

Big Swim Only Hours Away

The big swim for Scott Schooner is only hours away.

At 1a.m. Saturday he's scheduled to plunge off the Port Angeles breakwater and start his long battle with the tidal currents and numbing eight-degree water that flows through Juan de Fuca Strait.

Schooner will wear a wet suit and flippers to help him on the marathon swim which is being undertaken to raise money for charity.

If he makes it the B.C. Lions Society for Crippled Children will collect at least $1,000 in pledges.

The 21-year-old diver has been training for the ordeal since February at the Canadian Forces fleet diving unit in Esquimalt and he says he's confident he can make the swim.

Schooner has been running and swimming a combined distance of about 10 miles a day for nearly three months.

During the 18-mile swim he will keep his energy up by drinking sugar-enriched orange juice.

Schooner will be accompanied by two boats for the duration and a number of other divers will take turns swimming along side him.

GVLRA Spurns CUPE

The Greater Victoria Labor Relations Board has rejected a request from five locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees for a conciliation board.

GVLRA chairman Brian Smith said today the request was turned down unanimously by the association's board of directors at a Thursday meeting.

He said the employers' final offer of a 7.25-per-cent wage increase in each year of a two-year agreement should now be put to the more than 1,800 employees involved.

Smith said there have been about 30 meetings either with the individual locals or their Joint Negotiating Committee and if a conciliation board was set up the whole process would have to start over.

JNC spokesman Jim Walker's initial response to the GVLRA's rejection of the conciliation board was "that's bloody awful."

He said the locals are not convinced that the various municipal councils and the Greater Victoria school district understand the issues and so the next step will be to send them letters outlining the employees' position.

The focus will be on the need for some kind of cost-of-living protection in a two-year contract, he said.

The JNC represents Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt municipal employees as well as city inside workers and school board inside and outside workers.

VGH Ombudsman Now In Action

A six-month experimental ombudsman service went into effect at 8 a.m. Thursday at Victoria General Hospital.

From now on each patient admitted to the hospital will receive a pamphlet which gives the name of their head nurse and admitting doctor.

It also gives information on how to contact Mrs. Lorraine Gates, associate director of nursing, and the evening supervisor, as well as Keith Anderson, director of the hospital's patient and family counselling.

The patients are told they can contact any of those listed if they have a complaint or fill in details of the complaint on the back of the pamphlet and leave it on their meal tray.

Michael Ashwood-Smith, who heads the hospital board's quality assurance committee, said Thursday that Anderson's staff, who are all qualified social workers, will also make random spot checks with patients, and follow this up with random spot checks of patients who have been discharged.

If problems surface that cannot be solved, Anderson has authority to contact Ashwood-Smith's committee.

A.N. Patterson, chairman of the board of trustees, suggested such problems might well be resolved by such things as changes in procedure.

The number and types of complaints will be reviewed by Ashwood-Smith's committee each month.

He said, after a six-month trial period, the trustees should be in a position to judge whether or not a part-time ombudsman is necessary.

Club Marks 100

Centennial celebrations at Victoria's Union Club were launched Thursday night with a dinner honoring William McIntyre, recently appointed justice of the Supreme Court of Canada.

More than 100 persons including Lieutenant-Governor Henry Bell-Irving and Mr. Justice Lloyd McKenzie of the B.C. Supreme Court attended the dinner, the first of a series of events marking the formation of the club 100 years ago this month.

McIntrye, a former Victoria resident and club member for 20 years, was the first B.C. appointment to the Supreme Court of Canada since 1962.

Club president Ian Taylor said it was fitting to start the celebrations honoring a judge.

He noted the first president of the club was Sir Matthew Baillie Begbie, chief justice of B.C., who achieved fame as the province's "Hanging Judge."

Rejected Bear Gets a Future

Rejected by his mother and facing death by starvation, if not by bullets, a 14-month-old bear cub has been given a future by a Honeymoon Bay millworker.

Bob Maxwell, a boom worker, heard of the cub from truck drivers coming to the Western Forest Industries mill.

It had been wandering beside the road for several days and Maxwell learned a number of men were planning to shoot the cub. He drove out to have a look for himself.

"He was easy to handle because he was so weak from lack of food," Maxwell said. When he opened his lunch box to tempt the bear closer, peanut butter sandwiches and the rest of his lunch were gobbled up in seconds.

Maxwell took the bear back to the mill, where four tins of sardines and a quart of milk were finished in record time, then took him home.

The cub was just a runt, Maxwell said, weighing about 12 pounds, when it should have weighed 30 to 35 pounds at its age. "The mother could have been expecting again and just kicked him out — it's common among bears," Maxwell said.

The mill's personnel manager, Alec Walker, helped look for a permanent home for the cub and finally found one at the Penticton Game Farm where Maxwell took the cub.

He said the girls at the farm had named the cub Honeymoon, but he expected it to get shortened to Honey.

Maxwell will be retiring in May and plans to do some travelling, "and the first trip will be to visit the bear."

He Could Have Danced (And Robbed) All Night

VANCOUVER (CP) — A dancing thief with an ear for music and an eye for money did his thing at a local discotheque Thursday.

The owner of the club told police the bandit apparently hid after closing and then came out when the staff had finished work and gone home.

He turned up the music and lights, warmed up some coffee and started dancing.

He also ransacked the club's office. It was not immediately known how much was stolen.

Charity Walk Slated

The Boy Scouts of Canada are organizing the annual Kilometre Kaper on May 12 to support scouting and the United Way.

The Kaper — a walkathon — will have a main course of 32 kilometres (20 miles) and a mini-course of 16 kilometres (10 miles).

The Kaper will start between 8:30 and 9:30 a.m.

A total of $12,000 was raised two years ago but bad weather reduced the take to $8,000 in 1978.

Those turning in $25 will receive a Kaper certificate, a Kaper T-shirt will go to those turning in $50 while those turning in $100 will be presented with silver Kaper plaques.

The individual turning in the highest amount will receive a gold Kaper plaque.

An award will also go to the person with the most original or far-out Kaper achievement.

All walkers will receive a free drink at McDonald's Shelbourne store and a free drink and French fries at the Pandora store on completion of the Kaper.

Those interested in taking part should contact the Victoria Scout House at 388-4265 or the United Way office at 395-6708.

Husky Boosts Spending

CALGARY (CP) — Husky Oil Ltd. will spend $61.4 million in 1979, the first year of a five-year program to double its Lloydminster fields heavy-oil production.

The target production for the Lloydminster fields, situated on the Alberta-Saskatchewan border, is set at 40,000 barrels a day, the shareholders' meeting was told.

Altogether, the company will spend a record $114.1 million on exploration and development this year. A total of $450 million will be spent on heavy-oil production by 1983.

James Nielson, Husky president, said the Alberta portion of the Lloydminster fields may become one of Canada's most important oil-producing areas. Current technology is limited to recovering one-third of the oil in place.

Alaska Gas Pipeline Outlook Brightens

VANCOUVER (CP) — The outlook for construction of the Alaska Highway natural gas pipeline is considerably brighter now than it was a couple of months ago, Mitchell Sharp, commissioner of the federal northern pipeline agency, said Thursday.

Sharp, addressing the annual shareholders meeting of Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd., said events in the Middle East have injected a new sense of urgency into the project.

Westcoast and Alberta Gas Trunk Line Ltd. each has a half interest in Foothills Pipe Lines (Yukon) Ltd. which is responsible for construction of the Canadian portion of the line.

Completion of the line had been set back two years because of delays in the United States Congress and the American regulatory process was taking longer than originally anticipated, Sharp said.

But now the regulatory process can be accelerated and a start made on arranging financing for the line to take Alaska natural gas to the U.S. Midwest.

Sharp told the meeting that any additional exports of natural gas to the U.S. from Canada this year will be directed in a way that will facilitate the pipeline construction.

"This should be good news for your shareholders and also for all Canadians because of the jobs created," the former federal cabinet minister said.

Sharp said he was also happy to hear from John Anderson, Westcoast chief operating officer, that the interest of Foothills in construction of an oil pipeline to parallel the gas line would not impinge on the prior commitment to the movement of natural gas.

"I want to be quite sure there are no delays in the gas pipeline arising from oil pipeline construction," Sharp said.

He said his commission was established because the Alaska Highway pipeline, unlike any other, involves both Canada and the U.S., and to avoid mistakes made in the construction of the trans-Alaska Alyeska oil line.

All regulatory authority over the project was being focused in the one agency — a help to the companies involved — and the agency would also be ensuring that the project brings maximum benefits to Canada while reducing adverse social and environmental effects.

Anderson said in his report that Westcoast, whose shares are held 10 per cent by the provincially-owned B.C. Resources Investment Corporation and 32 per cent by federally-owned Petro-Canada, was confident that Foothills could finance, construct and operate both the proposed gas and oil lines.

Events are unfolding rapidly on both the oil and gas pipeline fronts, Anderson said, especially on the oil front.

Prime Minister Trudeau gave the Foothills oil proposal a boost on April 10 in Calgary when he said the federal government favored the company's plan, Anderson said.

Sombre Fears 'Coming True'

CALARY (CP) — Sombre Bank of Montreal predictions for the Canadian economy are coming true, according to the bank's chief economist.

Grant Reuber told the Economics Society of Alberta he would be the first to cheer if the year turns out better than expected.

The bank forecast a real 1979 increase in the gross national product of 2¼ per cent. Most other predictions were for an increase of three to 3½ per cent.

At this point . . . I would say we are likely to err on the low side. . . . If anything, the economy may not have the real rate of increase that we predicted."

Reuber said the bank expected less consumer spending because of the reinstatement of full retail sales tax in most provinces.

"The temporary reduction . . . last year did not stimulate new sales as much as it advanced the timing of sales. Many people who were planning on buying a new car in 1979 simply bought their car sooner."

Retail sales shot up after the sales tax reductions, but fell off heavily when they ended.

"In the final quarter of last year sales of durable goods, particularly automobiles, dropped sharply, at an annual rate of 20 per cent."

Reuber said the real rate of growth in the economy will be slowed because of a further decline in real income per worker.

"The decline of real income . . . ih 1978 was worse than we expected at 3½ per cent. We expect another drop in 1979. The effect . . . will naturally decrease sales.

Reuber does not anticipate a round of large wage increases such as those in 1975 which set in motion various government controls.

"At that time pressure came from government workers. The climate doesn't exist for government workers to be in the forefront of wage increases."

Ed Murphy Committed to Trial

VANCOUVER (CP) — The former host of a radio open-line program was committed Thursday to county court trial on conspiracy to bribe a cabinet minister.

Ed Murphy was charged in October, 1978, following allegations that an attempt had been made to offer a bribe to Environment minister Jim Nielsen for help in freeing 35 acres of land from the agricultural land reserve.

Vancouver investor Douglas Holme also was committed Thursday on the same charge. No trial date was set.

Relatives Barred

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Supreme Court has decided that reporters and relatives of a victim cannot attend the murder trial of a juvenile in family court.

Mr. Justice S. M. Toy made the ruling Thursday in the case of a 16-year-old boy charged with first-degree murder in the beating death of an elderly man.

Earlier, a family court judge had given permission to reporters and relatives to sit in on the trial providing they did not reveal the youth's identity. The youth's lawyer appealed that decision.

Mr. Justice Toy noted that the Juvenile Delinquent's Act states a juvenile's trial shall be heard without publicity and said the intent of the act is to discipline the child as a parent should, not to deal with him as a criminal.

The youth was charged after the body of Bill Dickinson was found tied to a chair last year in his home.

Guards Rehired

BURNABY (CP) — Two former guards at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre, dismissed last summer after they were accused of beating a prisoner, were reinstated Thursday.

Terry Sutherland and Harry Shepherd were reinstated at another undisclosed branch of the provincial corrections service after the British Columbia Government Employees Union filed a greivance on their behalf.

Trainee Faller Killed by Log

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Trainee faller Robert Dojack, 27, of this Vancouver Island city, was killed near here Wednesday when an uprooted tree suddenly fell and crushed him.

An experienced faller working with Dojack at the time was injured but was reported in stable condition in hospital. Both were employed by MacMillan Bloedel.

Car Tests Urged

KELOWNA (CP) — The city safety council should press for a motor vehicle inspection station in the Interior, a provincial driver examination spokesman said.

Peter Prentice said the council should also make sure testing of vehicles is compulsory.

Smash Kills Man

COURTENAY (CP) — Constantino Andrew Branchi, 53, of Nanaimo, was killed Wednesday in a two-car collision on the Island Highway about 21 kilometres north of here.

Words Snag SFU Dispute

BURNABY (CP) Labor Minister Allan Williams has become directly involved in the continuing strike by 650 clerical workers at Simon Fraser University in this Vancouver suburb.

Williams said Thursday he spent the previous day trying to resolve a problem surrounding the wording of a memo accepting an industrial inquiry commission.

The Association of University and College Employees has said it will take down its picket lines at the university once agreement is reached on conditions for the third-party intervention.

The walkout began March 8.

Earlier this week, 18 daycare workers at the university crossed the picket lines, saying they feared the seven daycare centres would be closed permanently if they did not return to work.

The daycare workers, members of the Social Services Employees Union, narrowly voted not to cross picket lines when the strike began.

John Damron, one of several directors of the daycare centres, said about 35 of the 135 children in the centres have already been withdrawn permanently.

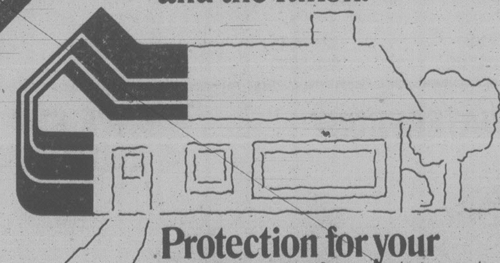
Announcing:
The New Home Warranty Program of British Columbia and the Yukon.



Protection for your new home investment.

The New Home Warranty Program of British Columbia and the Yukon was initiated by the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada, B.C. Council and was established in April, 1976.

It's a nice warm feeling ....
The Warranty means protection for you and your investment in a new home, five kinds of protection for five years from the date of purchase.

- Your deposit (money you paid in good faith to bind the contract) to the registered builder is protected, up to $5,000.
- Registered builders provide a one year workmanship and materials warranty, which is guaranteed by the Program.
- You are protected against structural defects in your new home to the end of the fifth year from date of occupancy, up to $20,000.
- In the event of a dispute with your builder, the Program provides impartial conciliation to help you resolve your differences.
- And, if you decide to sell your new home during the five year period, the balance of the warranty is transferable to the new owner.

Today, there are over 10,000 new homes in B.C. and the Yukon protected by the New Home Warranty Program. Look for this sign when buying your new home.

HOW TO GET FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS AND A LITTLE HOUSEWARMING GIFT FROM A COMPLETE STRANGER.

It sounds ridiculous, doesn't it?

It all started with a little innocent house-hunting one weekend.

And all of a sudden, you're on the verge of making the biggest purchase decision of your life, up to now.

If it's your first home, you're probably going to need more money than you've ever seen, let alone thought of borrowing.

Or, if you're trading your present home for a bigger one, you're probably slightly amazed at what it costs to move up a few notches in the housing market these days.

Even if you're simply renovating, or putting an addition onto your present home, the amount of cash you need is still enough to make you swallow hard!

Anyhow, to swing your deal, you need a mortgage. For twenty, forty, sixty, who knows how many thousands of dollars.

But since you read this ad, you pop some small change into a phone and call the mortgage people at Royal Trust.

The voice on the other end listens to the details of the deal. Asks a few questions. Doesn't even sound surprised when you mention that shocking amount you need. Just come in and sign the papers.

And the same voice will probably call you back, generally within a day or so, and tell you all's well. The money's yours.

You'll be delighted.

And interestingly enough, the voice on the other end of the line will sound delighted, too!

About that little housewarming gift.

As a small extra incentive to talk to Royal Trust about mortgages this spring, we've arranged a special housewarming gift for each new mortgage customer.

Once your mortgage is advanced, the people at your Royal Trust office (by now, no longer strangers!) would like you to have a Chubb Home Fire Protection Kit.

It contains a multi-purpose home fire extinguisher, and an early-warning smoke detector.

And though we hope you'll never have to use either, we're sure you'll sleep easier knowing they're on hand if you need them.

But all that comes later.

Right now, whether a mortgage is in your future or you're just thinking about shopping for a new home, why not break the ice.

Just call, or drop in to your nearest Royal Trust office and ask to speak to the mortgage expert.

Solitary-Cell 'Suicide' Riles Bordeaux Staff

MONTREAL (CP) — A prisoner burned to death in his cell in the solitary confinement section of north-end Bordeaux jail late Thursday afternoon, and Quebec provincial police termed the death a suicide.

A police spokesman said the man, who was not identified, apparently set fire to his cell with matches. Details of the incident were not available, either from police or from jail officials.

Six guards were taken to hospital after being overcome by smoke while leading to safety the 34 other prisoners being held in solitary confinement.

Earlier in the day, a prisoner escaped while being escorted on foot from the jail to a nearby hospital by a guard. Police said Rene Caron disappeared into a crowd and has not been recaptured.

The union representing the 250 guards at Bordeaux reacted immediately with a statement claiming both the fire death and the escape might have been avoided had more guards been on duty.

Last week, the union said the institution, which houses 700 prisoners, has been the scene of several violent incidents and may be ripe for mass escapes, hostage-takings or murders among prisoners. Guards have been subjected to beatings and death threats, the union says, claiming that the hiring of 100 more guards is needed to restore order.

But the jail's director, Roger Desrivieres, denied the situation was worse at Bordeaux than at other jails, saying it was impossible to eliminate violence completely.

Swells And No Bailer

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A man and his wife were rescued Thursday after spending 16 hours on Lake Ontario in a boat with only a margarine container to scoop out water.

Kenneth Flynn, 30 and his wife Irene, 27, were out testing their new 10-hp motor and 13-foot boat.

When the engine failed, they tried to use an electric trolling motor and paddles to get to shore but the lake was too rough.

$4-And-Ticket Murderers Given Maximum 25 Years

WELLAND, Ont. (CP) — Two men who stabbed a man to death during a robbery that netted them $4 and a bus ticket were sentenced today to serve the mandatory term for second-degree murder — 25 years in prison.

Leonard Robert Stewart, 27, of Merced, Calif., will be eligible for parole in 15 years, James Reginald Currie, 31, of Niagara Falls, Ont., will be eligible for parole within 10 years.

The two were charged after the body of Milton William Roth, 38, was found in bushes in Niagara Falls last July 27. Roth had been stabbed at least 34 times and a trail of blood led from the sidewalk.

The two men had pleaded not guilty to first-degree murder.

An Ontario Supreme Court jury convicted them Feb. 27 of the lesser offence of second-degree murder.

Stewart, whom Mr. Justice Robert Montgomery described as a man who showed no remorse for the killing, told the court today that he was innocent.

But Crown Attorney Allan Root said he thought the jury had accepted the Crown theory that Stewart was the perpetrator of the crime and Currie was the follower.

During their trial, a woman testified that Stewart and Currie admitted killing Roth while trying to rob him.

She said Currie told her Roth's wallet contained $4 and a bus ticket, so the two men got rid of it.

Currie testified that he stood on the sidewalk while Stewart ran down the street chasing and stabbing Roth.

He then helped Stewart drag Roth's body into the nearby bushes.

$1M Loto Windfall All Up in Smoke?

MONTREAL (UPC) — A 42-year-old man faces charges of burning down an east-end hotel he purchased shortly after winning a $1-million Loto-Canada prize.

Police charged Robert Harnois Wednesday with arson in connection with the burning July 1, 1978, of the Hotel Vannini, a popular establishment in Montreal's east end.

Harnois was said to have paid four times the estimated value of the hotel when he entered the hotel business after winning the lottery.

3 YEARS OF NDP

–the number of claims staked dropped from 78,901 in the year before the NDP took power to only 11,751 by 1975.

–the outlook for new, job-creating mines was almost non-existent.

Oil and gas:

–there were only 15 drilling rigs operating and provincial revenues from oil and gas totalled only $18 million yearly.

3 YEARS OF SOCIAL CREDIT

–the number of claims staked under Social Credit administration climbed to 33,917 by 1978.

Oil and gas:

–there are now roughly 90 drilling rigs operating and provincial revenues have increased to over $200 million yearly.

English Just 80% But Can't Beat Im At Mathematics!

Im, 16, a student at Toronto French School, won the contest with a perfect mark of 150 — the third time that feat has been accomplished since the competition began 17 years ago.

Im's score of 150 was 10 better than John Chew of the University of Toronto Schools, who finished second. Last year's winner, David Ash of Thunder Bay, Ont., was third.

But the shy winner, who beat about 24,140 other grade 9, 10 and 11 students across the country, said that "it was no big deal."

"It wasn't really that hard a contest for me. I supppose it was for the other kids, but I thought it was pretty easy."

Im had first-term marks this year that included 99 in physics, 98 in biology, 95 in chemistry, 90 in French and 80 in English.

'I'm not good at everything," the Korean native said.

"I have a problem in English. I couldn't speak it at all when I came here 5½ years ago."

Although he said the contest was easy, only 9 per cent of the students had scores higher than 60. The contest involved answering 30 questions for five marks each.

Im, who wants to be a mathematics professor, won $100 and is to receive a gold medal from Ontario Lt.-Gov. Pauline McGibbon at a ceremony in Waterloo, Ont., on June 22.

Paper Export Fraud Cited

MONTREAL (CP) — Two paper firms and six company directors have been charged with conspiring to defraud the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) of $165,000 on a $4-million contract to export paper to Indonesia in 1975-76.

The companies — Eddy Forest Products Ltd. and E. B. Eddy Ltd. — and the six individuals are also accused of conspiring to make false documents to authorize payments.

Among the accused are Eddy president John Scarth and executives George Neil, Earl Pearce, Harold Roddick and Jean Thibodeau.

The sixth accused, Charles Mosely, of St. Jolin, N.B., is head of SEA Transport Inc. He has been charged with conspiring with his compnay's agent in Jakarta to defraud CIDA of $10,000 in connection with a contract for supplying Domtar Fine Paper Ltd. products to the country.

Mosely is also accused of conspiring to defraud CIDA of an undetermined amount of money in Indonesian contracts with Abitibi Provincial Paper Company and E. B. Eddy Company.

Preliminary hearing for Mosely has been set for June 4, while the other accused will await a decision on whether to undergo trial in Quebec or Ontario.

Crack Squad Saves Miners

An oil fire started in a crusher chamber 1,300 feet underground, and 15 miners forced to stay down, were rescued by a five-member team which last year won the national non-coal-mine rescue competition at Glace Bay, N.S.

MB REPORTS: The first in a series of five.

1978 was good to us · it helps make up for 1975 · 1976 · 1977

Last year, MacMillan Bloedel made a good 10% return on capital employed—$100.9 million profit. There was strong demand for our products, and Canada's devalued dollar helped. In the woods, the mills, the offices, we kept a sharp eye on costs, worked harder, improved productivity, made some tough decisions. It all helped. We are a financially solid company with our roots in a financially sound province.

A 10% return may look pretty good. In fact, however, it's about average—what manufacturing firms in Canada have been making recently. In the years from '75 to '77, MacMillan Bloedel averaged only 2.8%.

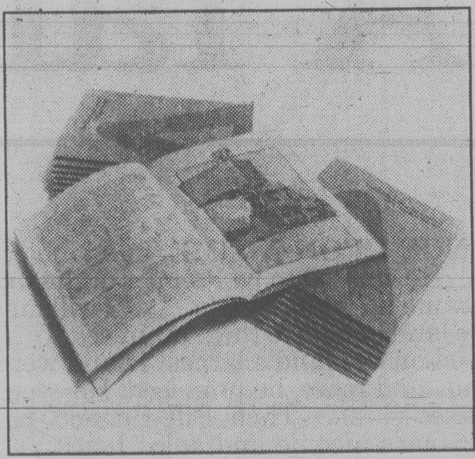
The financial community thinks our return should be nearer 14%. Surveys indicate that the public thinks we make around 18% profit, with some suggesting as high as 30%.

10% on investment in 1978 works out to be $100.9 million. $76.8 million of that has been ploughed back into the business—to buy new, more productive equipment, to rebuild mills to improve their production, reduce pollution, hasten reforestation, provide more secure jobs.

Healthy profit catches the eye of the financial community. If we need extra money for growth it becomes easier to borrow at reasonable interest. As you know, your banker is kinder when your credit is good.

Our improved profit in 1978 meant that, if you were a shareholder, you received a bigger dividend for the year. 24% of the profit was distributed among our 17,000 shareholders.

This kind of profit tells the world that MacMillan Bloedel is financially healthy. It is no wonder that outside companies have sought to take over this independent British Columbia enterprise.



This is MacMillan Bloedel's annual report. It explains how business was last year. It covers our operations, products and markets, gives financial figures for the past several years, discusses future plans. If you would like a copy, just write us at MB REPORTS, 1075 West Georgia Street, Vancouver, V6E 3R9.

NDP Leader Has Kind Words for M-B

By JOHN MARSHALL
FP News Service

It was enough to make former New Democratic leader David (corporate-welfare-bums) Lewis spin in his retirement.

There was his successor, Ed Broadbent having only the highest praise for at least one corporate giant, MacMillan Bloedel.

Completing a tour Thursday of the huge 1,400-worker paper mill at Port Alberni, he said the company was "an example of a corporate citizen doing a good job."

He pointed out that most of its products were sold in export markets.

And he said he'd been told nearly 100 per cent of its equipment was made in Canada, providing jobs across the country.

He also cited the company's $37 million expansion program which would mean more jobs at Port Alberni too.

"All things considered, it's a fine performance."

However, in Newfoundland earlier in his campaign, he issued a written statement criticizing Ottawa for establishing and proposing $435 million in grants for the pulp and paper industry "despite (a) high level (of) profits."

And Mac Blo was on the NDP hit list of big money makers. It was not one of the leaders but it still registered a 66.2 per cent increase in profits last year, the statement said.

Broadbent was not only happy to find what he considered a good corporate citizen, he liked all the NDP stickers he saw on hardhats and the NDP handshakes from the mill workers.

He said it made him feel as though he was back in an automobile plant in his home town of Oshawa.

And he saw a 16-ton election sign — a 20-foot-long newsprint roll with "Vote NDP" painted along it.

Don Benzia, the squat and husky president of Local 592 of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Workers, who sports two earrings in one of his ears, said his union would be doing much more than in the past to work for the NDP.

Earlier, in a brief TV-camera oriented press conference on the bow of a ferry crossing Georgia Strait, Broadbent linked unemployment to foreign ownership of Canadian resources.

It makes more sense to export plastic products instead of gas, he said, furniture instead of wood, steel products instead of iron-ore.

Broadbent . . . Captain for a trip across strait

And pointing to the lack of an industrial strategy in Canada, he said the country needs long-range planning like that which rebuilt Japan and western Europe in the decade after the Second World War.

The NDP leader also managed to do some "main decking" to shake hands.

He was told by passenger John Greenhough that 50 years ago firemen in Hamilton, Ont., turned their hoses on members of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation (CCF) for advocating state medical care.

"They thought they were Communist instigators or something," recalled Greenhough.

The CCF and its successor, the NDP, spearheaded the push for universal medical care and it was established nationally in 1965.

The program now is in trouble because doctors are opting out of the program, saying it does not pay them enough.

Preservation of medicare is one of the major NDP election issues, although Broadbent said: "I never thought in my generation that medicarre would reemerge as an issue."

It was, however, a generally quiet and gentle day for Broadbent as he swung down-Island, holding small gatherings of party workers and winding up in Victoria on his way to Winnipeg.

He was told by journalists that Conservative leader Joe Clark had charged during a discussion of defence policies, that the only NDP policy woule be to cut back on the Armed Forces.

"That's typical of Joe Clrk," said Broadbent. "As a former member of the RCAF, I have never said the role of the military was to disappear."

He said the NDP particularly wanted to upgrade the coast guard operations on both coasts and he said Canada has to rely often on the U.S. coast guard to enforce its 200-mile limit on the West Coast.

"We certainly see an important role for the Armed Services," he said. He said the NDP would like to see Canada with a highly mobile defence force second to none which could be put at the disposal of the United Nations.

In a short speech in Duncan, the NDP leader contended that "Joe Trudeau" and "Pierre Clark" are engaged in a mud-slinging match in the campaign.

In a spirited speech to 200 party workers in this Vancouver Island community, Broadbent said the public is aware there is no real difference in the Liberal and Conservative parties.

Trudeau was saying he should remain prime minister because he is tougher than Clark.

"If we want a tough guy as prime minister, let's import John Wayne," Broadbent suggested.

Broadbent said Clark must be worried because he had attacked the NDP three days in a row, saying earlier this week that a vote for the NDP would be a vote for Trudeau.

"That's absurd and ridiculous," Broadbent said. "But more absurd than that is that a vote for Joe Clark is a vote for Joe Clark."

ELECTION 79

Rondeau Out On Vote Trail

GRANBY, Que. (CP) — After a six-day spell in jail, former Socred MP Gilbert Rondeau opened his re-election campaign Thursday with a fervent call for prison reform.

The 51-year-old career politician, freed from jail Wednesday when he appealed a five-month sentence for fraud, told 300 enthusiastic supporters that his fellow prisoners wiled away their time by eating, playing cards and reading pornographic magazines.

Rondeau, now running as an independent, faces an uphill battle to keep his seat in the mainly rural Eastern Townships riding of Shefford after a series of criminal convictions during the last two years for fraud, arson and conspiracy.

Rondeau's release from jail on his own recognizance permits him to campaign. Under election laws, candidates must have the right to vote, which is not accorded prisoners.

Challenging Rondeau are Liberal, NDP and Progressive Conservative candidates. No Social Credit candidate has been named, but party leader Fabien Roy said Thursday the Socreds would run someone in the riding.

Takeover Bids Alarms Gibson

BURNABY (CP) — Canada needs an independent review agency to watch the possibly dangerous trend to industrial and corporate concentration, says Gordon Gibson, federal Liberal candidate in North Vancouver-Burnaby.

Gibson, former leader of the B.C. Liberal party, told the chamber of commerce in this Vancouver suburb Wednesday the recent wave of completed and attempted takeovers is alarming.

"Canadian Pacific almost got MacMillan Bloedel. The Bay got Simpsons, then Weston tried for The Bay and lost out to Thomson. Brascan is after Woolworth's and Edper is after Brascan.

"And in the past year there have been dozens that have never hit the popular press."

He said there are advantages to takeovers, such as stronger management and better financing, but warned of less competition, reduced availability of stocks and greater inefficiencies.

"There is one common negative factor that applies to all takeovers and mergers, and that is a further concentration of economic decision-making in Canada — already too small a country in that sense."

A fairytale.

ONCE UPON A TIME, in a land called British Columbia, there lived a man called Bill Bennett. He wanted to be Premier of the fair land. So he thought, and thought, and thought and, finally, came up with an idea. □ "I will make promises," he said. □ So he went out among the people of the land and gave them promises. To some, he said he would improve their health care. Those who lived on the land's largest island were guaranteed better ferry service to the mainland. All this, and more, he promised. He even said to the people, "I will freeze your taxes". □ Then Bill Bennett became Premier. □ He increased everyone's income and sales taxes. □ He tripled the cost of some people's car insurance. □ Quadrupled the cost of staying in a hospital. And doubled the people's bus fares. The people on the island found their ferry rates doubled. Overnight. He even charged the British Columbians twice as much to go camping in their land. □ All in all, he increased people's taxes by 50 percent.* All these payments left the people of the land with very few coins in their purses to spend in the shops. Sad shop keepers had to close their doors. Then Bill Bennett saw it wasn't working out. So he began to sell things. The natural resources, three ferry ships, a bus line, one of the fair land's largest food plants, and a pile of other things. □ All sold to people who lived outside the fair land.

NOW, Bill Bennett wants to be Premier again.
He's out among the people.
And he's making more promises.

Integrity in government.
One more reason.

Voters' List Deadline May 4

OTTAWA (CP) — Voters overlooked by enumerators have two weeks to get their names on the voters' list, or they will lose their right to vote in the May 22 federal general election.

Chief Electoral Officer Jean-Marc Hamel said Thursday in an interview that the lists prepared by enumerators who collected names door-to-door are "damned close to complete."

He said only 1.5 to 2 per cent of the estimated 15 million eligible voters were left off the lists in a process that costs between $15 million and $16 million.

Double-page advertisements began appearing in daily newspapers across the country Thursday, telling these people to phone their returning officer — the person responsible for running the election in each constituency — to have their names added to the list.

Voters who did not receive a form stating they were enumerated have four ways of getting on the voters' list before the May 4 deadline, Hamel said.

Any eligible voter — a Canadian citizen more than 18 years old who resided in Canada on April 2 — can sign an application at the returning office. This is the simplest procedure for most people, Hamel says.

The voter may ask the returning officer to send a revising officer to his home to collect the pertinent information.

The voter can go in person, or send someone on his behalf, to a sitting for revision of voting lists in each of the 282 ridings on May 2, 3 or 4.

Hamel said some people are upset at being left off the lists, but said enumerators do their best to catch everybody. They make at least two visits to every house and can collect information from a neighbor or landlord if they believe it to be reliable.

"In spite of every effort by the enumerators, there are people who will be missed," he said. "But enumeration had to close on some date."

Hamel must publish the number of eligible voters — estimated at 14.9 million — on April 21 so that political parties can work out how much money they can spend on their campaigns in each riding.

Under the new Election Expenses Act, candidates in most ridings are restricted to spending $1 for each of the first 15,000 voters, 50 cents for the next 10,000 and 25 cents for the rest.

Getting off a voters' list is more complicated than getting on, Hamel said. This was a safeguard to keep people from removing names other than their own.

A person who objects to having his name on the list — for religious or any other reasons — may go before the revising officer in one of the May sittings and ask to have his name removed. No reason need be given.

A person who is ineligible to vote — because he is too young or not a Canadian citizen — may ask an eligible voter to file an affadavit of objection with the returning officer on his behalf.

There is no onus on a person who is mistakenly put on a list to remove his name. But many people take this precaution to keep someone else from voting under their name, Hamel said.

The penalties for voting when ineligible, or for getting on two voting lists, run from fines of up to $1,000 or a year in jail to $5,000 or five years.

Clark Would Call Conference

TORONTO (CP) — Constitutional change to reflect federal leadership in economics and provincial leadership in culture can be achieved, Joe Clark told business leaders Thursday.

The Progressive Conservative leader told a friendly Empire Club audience of 1,300 that Prime Minister Trudeau doesn't understand the nature of Canada.

"Too often he (Trudeau) and the quite similar people he drew around him tried to change the country to fit their version of what the country should be . . . ," Clark said.

"They have been govern-creating a single national ing against the nature of the nation. . . To govern a nation one must first understand it."

Clark said federal-provincial mistrust can be broken with minor constitutional changes followed by more important ones dealing with economics and culture.

A Conservative government elected May 22 would call a national conference to set economic goals for Canada. The country currently had no sense of economic direction, although goals had seldom been more necessary.

Liberal preoccupaion with identity in Canada had obscured the fact that the country was "a community of communities."

In an immense country you live on a local scale and government makes the nation work by recognizing we are fundamentally a community of communities," Clark said.

Today Clark campaigns primarily in St. Hyacinthe and the Granby area of Quebec's Eastern Townships.

Heward Grafftey one of the party's two Quebec MPs in the last Parliament, is running for re-election in Granby.

St. Hyacinthe went Liberal in a byelection Oct. 16. Its former Conservative MP, Cluude Wagner, was appointed a senator by Trudeau.

Clark also will stop at Cowansville and Shefford before returning to Ottawa for a quiet weekend.

PM Groping, Says Stevens

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Federal Conservative finance critic Sinclair Stevens told local Tories Thursday that asking Prime Minister Trudeau to unify the country "is like asking the Boston Strangler to straighten your tie."

A crowd of 200 at a local Progressive Conservative annual meeting cheered Stevens who described the prime minister's campaign tactics as groping.

"He realizes he is on the run, heading for defeat" unless he can salvage the government somehow, the Tory critic said.

Stevens said Trudeau realized his failure to make inroads in the campaign with pitches for national unity so he began concentrating on energy policy and the Crown corporation PetroCanada for support.

"Hi, Barfy's mother!"

Contract Bridge : B. Jay Becker

You are South and the bidding has gone:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What would you bid now with each of the following four hands?

1. ♠AJ97 ♡52 ◇J8 ♣KQ843
2. ♠AJ865 ♡10 ◇5 ♣AQ9852
3. ♠KJ92 ♡Q84 ◇7 ♣AK763
4. ♠KQ74 ♡Q7 ◇2 ♣AJ9654

1. Pass. There comes a time when you've shown all your values and there's nothing further to show. True, North opened the bidding, but he has now signed off twice under the compulsion of your two forcing bids. Obviously, he must have a minimum opening bid. He presumably would have shown more interest in a game if he had values in excess of a minimum. Since you have no values beyond those already indicated, it's high time to put a stop to the proceedings.

Another way to test the situation is to apply the general principle that it takes two opening bids, or their equivalent, to make game. North seems to have a minimum opening bid, and you have less than an opening bid, so the combined total comes to less than game.

2. Three spades. The purpose of this bid is to tell partner that you hold 6-5 distribution. North will realize that you would not bid three spades in this sequence with only a four-card suit. He will therefore know you have a "five-bagger" in spades.

At the same time, North will recognize that you must have at least six clubs, since you would have bid spades first had the two suits been of equal length. This is consistent with the general principle of first bidding the higher-ranking of two equally long suits.

3. Four hearts. Game should be regarded as certain despite partner's two signoffs. However, there's still a good chance for a slam, and you indicate this by jumping to four hearts.

4. Three hearts. It is still not clear whether the best game contract lies in hearts, notrump or clubs. The best way of representing your shortage in diamonds is by now showing heart support, which, in conjunction with your two previous bids, should enable North to choose the best final contract.

Ordinarily, Q-x is not adequate support for a suit partner has rebid only once, since the reptition of a suit is often based on only five-card length. However, there is still a strong possibility that North has a six-card heart suit, and a trial bid of three hearts (forcing) is therefore clearly advantageous.

What would the respective shares be under Mabel's scheme?

Worker Shortage Forecast

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Finance Minister Jean Chretien says there will be a shortage of workers rather than a shortage of jobs in five years.

Chretien told a news conference Thursday that some of Canada's other major problems also will be solved within that time.

He said 400,000 more Canadians are working this year than were last year at this time.

Chretien said he would not release a budget before the May 22 federal election.

He also said that Alberta should share more of its oil with the rest of Canada.

Chretien said that from 1959 to 1974, the rest of Canada paid almost twice the world market prices for Alberta oil to help the province estabish its oil industry.

"I'SE THE B'YE" (i.e. to keep Canada united) was gist of Trudeau's folk singing Thursday in Wabush.

PM Paints 'Garcon Joe' Image

CORNER BROOK, Nfld. (CP) — As a prime minister, Joe Clark would be little more than "a head waiter" taking orders from provincial premiers, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said Thursday.

"We can't have after the next election a guy who is wishy-washy, a guy who is not sure, a guy who comes and goes on as fundamental a question as the unity of Canada."

Swiping at his chief political opponent during a day of stops in this island province, Trudeau said the Progressive Conservative leader has been promising to give away federal power to Conservative premiers in return for May 22 election support.

That meant Clark would sacrifice the central authority needed to reconcile disputes among provinces over such key issues as energy and fisheries.

"The federal prime minister would be kind of a head waiter taking orders from the premiers," Trudeau told a Liberal rally of about 350 in a high school auditorium here before flying to Yarmouth, N.S., for the night.

By contrast, Trudeau said a re-elected Liberal government would be prepared "to take decisions which are not popular in some parts of Canada."

He underscored the point earlier at Goose Bay, where he told an airport audience that he would fight Quebec efforts to block the flow of hydro power from the Lower Churchill Falls in Labrador to the Maritimes.

And he made clear he feels his party is better equipped than Clark's Conservatives to resist moves by Quebec to wrest control of Labrador from Newfoundland.

At Goose Bay and in the nearby isolated community of Wabush, the prime minister pledged to use federal constitutional powers to make sure power moved from the $1.5 billion Lower Churchill Falls hydro project in Labrador through Quebec to power-short Maritime markets.

"We are hoping to ensure that the energy produced here will serve to help the other parts of Canada," he said.

Although Ottawa and Newfoundland have signed an agreement to develop the Lower Churchill Falls at Gull Island, Quebec has not agreed to allow the power to pass through its territory.

Under terms of an old agreement, Quebec buys power from the upper Churchill Falls development — it began producing in 1972 — at a fixed price now far below current market value.

Newfoundland had been unsuccessful in convincing Quebec to increase the price and has resorted to court action.

Meeting Set

An all-candidates meeting for the federal riding of Malahat-The Islands will be held at 7 p.m. May 17 in the dining room of the Sooke Community Association building on Eustace Street in Sooke.

A BRIC Share Con?

decided to apply for the shares through a bank instead.

"She got real nasty," said Mrs. Palmer. "She said to my daughter 'If you think I'm making any money on this, you're mistaken' and then hung up."

Alexander said if it was a confidence game, the woman would have to have access to a bank, trust company, investment brokerage or credit union, the only authorized dealers in the shares. If she had access, it is possible she could enter the applications on her own and forge signatures when the shares are issued on Aug. 7.

But this is unlikely, he suggested. There are just too many checks and cross-checks in the system to provide an avenue for fraud.

Alexander said dealers have been instructed not to solicit business door-to-door and anyone caught doing so would be in violation of his contract with the government.

He was at a loss to explain how the woman got the application forms because they are not supposed to be removed from the premises of the financial institutions.

Alexander said the woman's assurance the shares would be sent through the mail is equally baffling. Applicants must return to the same financial institution where they completed the forms to pick up their shares.

A police spokesman said no investigation has been initiated as yet because "we haven't had a complaint that there was any intent to defraud."

Alexander said anyone who has handed over completed forms to door-to-door solicitors should contact the B.C. Systems Corp. if only to ensure the shares are properly registered in their name.

taxied down the runway and took off.

"All he asked was weather conditions and then he took off," McGillivray said. "No other word was spoken."

He described flying conditions at the time as excellent.

Witness Gertrude Van Biert, who lives about 500 metres from the end of the runway, saw the twin-engine Piper Apache plane come low over the trees and watched it nose into the ground. A wing broke off and suddenly the downed aircraft was engulfed in flames.

Steve Ryback, public affairs officer for Transport Canada, said cause of the crash is anyone's guess although he noted some people at the scene thought they detected something wrong with one of the engines.

Pacific Coastal Airlines was founded nine years ago. The company has four other Piper Apache planes and operates 10 flights a day to communities on the Island. The airline was sold April 5 to the Jim Pattison Group of Vancouver.

The sale is subject to approval by the Canadian Transport Commission and that, a spokesman for the group said today, may take several months to complete.

Ryback said that since 1970 there have been seven air crashes in the Nanaimo area, none of them fatal until Thursday. He said the last fatal accident occurred about 20 years ago but he was unable to furnish details.

Purse-Snatching

Victims are Frail, But Can be Prudent

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

He's the most cowardly of thieves.

His victims are little old ladies, too frail to fight back.

The scenario has been repeated about 15 times in Greater Victoria so far this year, mostly in the downtown core and James Bay.

That's not a big number, as crimes go in this area, and neither does it reflect much of an increase over similar periods in past years.

There are exceptions. A couple of years ago two 19-year-olds were convicted on several counts. They both served two to three-year penitentiary terms. The Criminal Code allows a maximum sentence of 14 years.

With juveniles, it's a different story.

Newton says the worst they face is a slap on the wrist and an admonishment from the judge not to do it again.

Purse-snatching, after all, has never been considered one of the heavier juvenile crimes. But don't tell the victims that.

Newton says most of the victims are in their 60s or 70s — a few have been in their 80s — and "the frailer the better."

Attacks usually occur in the early evening, just before dusk, and normally on deserted streets although there is no hard and fast rule. Recently a woman on a twilight stroll near Fort and Broad in the centre of town was pushed to the pavement and lost her purse to a trio of thugs. She had only $4 in her wallet. That, says Newton, is about the average loss.

Most of the attacks come from behind. The method may vary. Last year about a dozen elderly women were robbed of their purses by a twosome on bicycles. After a lengthy investigation police caught the bike bandits. The culprits turned out to be only 12 years old.

"The victims are strictly targets of opportunity," says Newton. "Some of the kids will hit anything. If they can grab a purse and think they can get away with it, they will. It's sort of like going back to Oliver times. We just don't have a Fagan."

The worst areas are James Bay and Fairfield. Incidents in outlying districts are rare. Oak Bay only gets one or two a year, says Insp. Jack Groves. The same applies in Saanich. And Insp. Peter Merriott of Esquimalt can only recall two incidents in the past year-and-a-half.

The statistics aren't surprising. The crime is generally associated with more highly populated areas.

Sgt. John Maybin, head of community services on the Victoria force, says there are several things persons can do to protect themselves.

The most obvious is don't carry a purse, or if you do, put your wallet in your pocket. That's one way to minimize losses.

Another is to carry your purse slightly in front of you, clutched under your arm. That way the would-be snatcher approaching from behind can't see it and will probably leave you alone.

Maybin says anyone attacked shouldn't resist. The possible physical injuries could be far worse than the loss of a few dollars.

He says persons should be cautious about inviting trouble. Don't walk on deserted streets, or if you must, do so with a companion. And while shopping, don't allow your handbag to fall open or leave it lying in a shopping cart unattended.

Recently a team of young girls was involved in the theft of several purses from shopping carts.

One would attract the victim's attention while the other lifted the bag out of the cart.

TOWN TALK

One of the fascinating things about politics is the way carping critics and hostile opponents can be turned into instant converts and true believers.

Take Victoria mayor and Social Credit candidate Mike Young, for example. To hear him speak at the nomination meeting the other night you'd think he'd been a true-blue Socred since he was in diapers.

But little more than two years ago the mayor wasn't quite so complimentary.

In his inaugural address to city council of Jan. 4, 1977, he was downright rude, calling the provincial government "the largest welfare bum in Victoria."

Among other things he attacked the Socred administration for its doubling of ferry rates and raising the sales tax to 7 per cent. Those actions combined with others had "systematically wrecked Victoria as the No. 1 retirement centre in Canada."

Granted, Young's criticism embraced the performance of both the Socred administration and its NDP predecessors, but re-reading his speech it's impossible to tell whether he considered one any improvement on the other.

However, it's now probably safe to assume that he does have a preference.

Those ingenious inventors with their egg-carrying machines will be whooping it uppity-up-up and downy-down-down at the Provincial Museum on Saturday when the second annual Great British Columbia Egg Race gets under way.

Museum director Yorke Edwards isn't sure how many participants will show up but naturally everyone is expecting the race to be a smashing success.

The object of the endeavor is to devise a machine that will carry an egg the furthest distance using only a No. 10 elastic band as power source.

Last year entries from Burnaby gave everyone a shell-aking, sweeping the field in all three classes — 13 years and under, 14 to 19, and the awesome open event.

Run-offs begin at 10 a.m.

Looking for a spot to get close to Mother Nature this weekend, and not too far from home?

The cool weather retarded some plants, but they have caught up in the last few days.

This weekend and on Saturday and Sunday, April 28 and 29, the Thetis Park Nature Sanctuary Association, will give guided tours through the sanctuary. Plants are identified for vistiors.

Millie Pickard, six, of 127 Eberts, is $25 richer, thanks to entering the B.B. Provincial Dental Health Poster Contest.

She received a cheque for that amount after placing second in the competition for the kindergarten-Grade 1 group. She attends Sir James Douglas school.

Out of the money but winners in the Victoria area were Stefano Maestralla of View Royal school who was top local Grade 7 student and Beverly Minten of Doncaster school, who topped Grade 4 students here.

* * *

A new unit of measurement — cabbages — would be incorporated in planning jargon if Saanich farmer and alderman Geoff Vantreight had his way.

When former alderman Ian Cass was protesting the other night that most Saanich residents would be unable to understand the community plan's references to hectares, Vantreight replied: "It's easy — one hectare, 2½ acres, 21 tons of cabbage."

But presumably it all depends which way you slice it . . .

Consumer Body Spurns Boycott As Unfair to Local Retailers

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Consumer boycotts may be an unfair weapon because they hurt local retailers who often are not to blame for high prices, local Consumer Association of Canada president Barbara Leonard said today.

"We are against organized boycotts because many of the expensive products are imported and not the fault of Victoria merchants."

She was commenting on the emergence of a new Canadian group, Women Against Rising Prices, which is organizing branches in B.C.

WARP has a single weapon — organized boycotts of selected products.

Founded in Ontario, WARP has branches in Vancouver and Nanaimo and has Victoria as its next target.

It will get a mixed reception from the 2,000-member Victoria branch of the Consumers Association of Canada.

"Obviously we can't stop our members from joining this new organization if they want to but there will be no official link between the two groups," Mrs. Leonard said.

"Our methods are quite different. We gather information and make representations to Ottawa on beef quotas, subsidies for powdered milk and other questions. We do not boycott."

Meanwhile, Vibeke Sandberg of Nanaimo is gearing up to promote a massive boycott against selected products in V.I. stores.

"We are just getting organized now," she said. "Soon we will have branches everywhere and we will be into a new boycott program every week."

WARP executives in Brampton meet every Monday night to decide on a list of eight products to be boycotted for one week, running from Wednesday to Wednesday.

The list changes every week.

The main activity of WARP is to get the list published and encourage consumers to follow it.

It has already claimed some successes, especially with lettuce prices.

Mrs. Sandberg said boycott items in the current list include cabbage, grapefruit, frozen vegetables, flour, chicken, canned meat, spices and colored, perfumed toilet paper.

The list always centres on products that have recently risen sharply in price or for other reasons are not economical buys, Mrs. Sandberg said.

The boycott is the best weapon, she says, because nothing else seems to work.

Mrs. Leonard replies that boycotts are an emotional weapon that sometimes work but are often unfair.

A better approach, she said, is to work through the federal government, which has the power to alter market conditions and to establish subsidies.

Besides, she said, the Consumers Association of Canada has to maintain a responsible approach because it receives grants from the federal government through the ministry of consumer and corporate affairs.

The grant was established to enable the CAC to finance its interventions against applications for rate increases by airlines, telephone companies and similar firms.

Mrs. Leonard said that, as an individual, she instinctively boycotted products she felt were too expensive.

"Shoppers do that sort of thing all the time. But that's quite different from an organized boycott which can create an economic hardship for local merchants."

She said the CAC has survived for 39 years by using "a calm, responsible approach" and has watched organizations like WARP come and go over the years.

"Maybe this one will be effective, maybe not. We'll have to wait and see."

She said the CAC would be watching from a discreet distance and will make clear to the public that there is no connection between the two organizations because the CAC does not sponsor boycotts.

Inlet Dragged For Canoeist

Officers aboard the Sidney-based RCMP vessel Harvison were searching the waters between Coles Bay and Satellite Channel this morning for a 49-year-old Saanich electrical contractor believed to have fallen from his canoe and drowned Wednesday.

Central Saanich police chief Bob Miles said Chester Coons of 3971 Cedar Hill Crossroads went to his cabin at 8410 Lawrence Road early Wednesday morning apparently to do repairs on the building.

When his wife arrived later in the day Coons and the canoe were missing although his car with his keys and wallet inside was parked in the driveway.

Miles said Coons' 15-foot red fibreglass canoe was recovered Wednesday morning after it had washed up on the shore at a waterfront home in Ardmore owned by Peter Hyslop.

Police using the RCMP helicopter carried out a shoreline search Thursday without success.

A spokesman said intensive searches of the area involving divers, the RCMP helicopter, police tracking dogs, and volunteer search teams have failed to find any sign of John Duprau of 2627 Dunlevy.

Duprau was working with two other men on a house beside the inlet when he began to feel ill and went to a nearby cabin to rest.

When the men went to get him shortly after 5 p.m. he had gone.

Expert Borrowed For Queen's Printer

The provincial government is borrowing a printing expert from the federal government for two years to oversee technological changes in the Queen's Printer.

Howard Britt, printing production manager for the federal government, is coming to Victoria under the Federal Interchange Program which lends executives and specialists to provincial governments.

"Britt's mandate will be to integrate technological and systems changes to the best advantage," Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis said in a press release.

The Queen's Printer does all the printing for government ministries and for most boards and commissions.

Rest Homes Protest Rates

New rates announced by the provincial health ministry for B.C.'s community care facilities will not allow them to deliver the standard of care required, a spokesman for the rest home operators claimed today.

Trevor Shuckburgh, president of the B.C. Association of Private Care Facilities, described the rate increases which came into effect April 1 as "totally inadequate."

He said association representatives will meet Tuesday with Health Minister Bob McClelland to express their concerns.

The increases announced by the ministry in late March range from 50 cents to $1.70 per day (about 3.3 to 6 per cent) for personal care and three levels of intermediate care, Shuckburgh said. But the rate for extended care patients remains unchanged at $34.50 per day.

In a brief submitted last December the association had asked for increases averaging about 15 per cent.

Shuckburgh said the new rates do not recognize the substantial increase in operating costs or the private sector's right to a fair return on its investment.

"If you are running a licensed care facility, whether it's 10 beds in a converted home or 200 beds in a modern building specifically designed to deliver care, you must conform with all the proper regulations and deliver the service that is required."

Local Groups Share In $6M Service Grants

A number of Victoria agencies have received grants from the human resources ministry.

The community grants, among $6.2 million distributed throughout the province, are awarded to local groups providing services for handicapped and to family support programs, youth services and senior services, outreach programs, street workers, and child-care counsellors.

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy said financial assistance to such groups supports the role of volunteers.

Last year the ministry provided $5.95 million in similar grants.

Local organizations receiving grants include Garth Homer Centre for the Handicapped which got $89,250 for programs and $8,700 for transportation.

The Greater Victoria Citizen Advocacy Society was awarded $26,600 while $7,200 went to the Physically Handicapped Action Committee.

A $17,500 transportation grant was also given to the Multiple Sclerosis Society of V.I.

Three area organizations received grants for youth services and teen activities — $22,000 to the Peninsula Community Association, $18,400 to Vic West Association and $77,900 to the Victoria YM-YWCA's detached youth work project.

The Greater Victoria Citizens Counseling Centre received $22,900 while $16,300 went to the Saanich Peninsula Guidance Association.

The Victoria Volunteer Bureau received $37,400 and a grant of $7,600 went to a similar organization in Oak Bay.

Family support services grants were awarded to the Downtown-Blanshard Advisory Committee ($17,000), the Esquimalt, Vic West and View Royal Community Advisory Committee ($21,500) and the Victoria Single Parents Resource Centre Society ($7,900).

NEED, the Victoria crisis line, received $37,000.

What Causes Vandalism?

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier today met with police officers, social workers and representatives of youth groups to discuss ways and means of countering a vandalism problem which caused an estimated $200,000 damage in the municipality last year.

Couvelier said the objective of the four-hour seminar was to learn about existing programs for young people, analyse what gaps exist and what additional activities and co-ordination are needed.

The emphasis of the anti-vandalism drive will be on prevention, the mayor stressed.

"I don't think there's anything to be gained in a target-hardening approach; we're not talking about more surveillance or tougher penalties.

"Instead we're talking about trying to get to the root causes," he added. "It's the only approach that makes any sense."

Couvelier said officials estimate Saanich's vandalism for the last six months was around $45,000 ($34,000 in the engineering-public works field and $11,000 in parks).

Projected over a year that's about $90,000 but damage to private property and unreported damage would more than double the figure, he said.

Among those expected to send representatives to today's seminar were the RCMP and Saanich police department, human resources ministry, Family and Children's Court, YM-YWCA, Boys' and Girls' Clubs of Greater Victoria, municipal parks and recreation department and the Greater Victoria and Saanich school districts.

Canada 'Belongs' in Loss to Soviets

MOSCOW (CP) — For the first time since it arrived at these world hockey championship, Team Canada looks as though it belongs.

The Canadians, who got into the championship round on the strength of some not-too-impressive wins over a young, college-oriented United States team and Finland in the preliminary round, were beaten 5-2 Thursday by the defending champion, Soviet Union.

But it was a well-disciplined exhibition that restored some hope for the sparse Canadian contingent in the crowd of 12,000 at the Lizhniki Ice Palace that a medal here is not unthinkable.

"We showed out there tonight we can play their hockey, and it wouldn't take much for us to be as good as they are on their own ice surface," young Bobby Smith said in the Canadian dressing room later.

"Heck, we've been working on a system for 10 days its taken them since 1968 to perfect."

His Minnesota North Stars linemates, Al MacAdam and Steve Payne, also played prominent roles in the contest and on the whole controlled play whenever they were on the ice.

MacAdam also scored while Payne played a strong game and should have been given an assist on the MacAdam goal, since it was his shot that sent Soviet netminder Vladislav Tretiak sprawling and opened the goalmouth for MacAdam's shot.

In the other championship round game played Thursday, Sweden almost pulled a major upset but had to settle for a 3-3 tie with Czechoslovakia after blowing one- and two-goal leads.

Bengt-Oke Gustafsson, a speedy 20-year-old who may be Edmonton Oilers' second protected player for the NHL expansion draft in June, scored for Sweden, as did Leif Holmgren and Tomas Wallin.

Although Canada won two of three games in the preliminary round, only the points resulting from games involving other championship game opponents count.

The format was adopted for the first time this year.

While the loss all but eliminated the Canadians from the hunt for the gold, it was evident to most obsevers they were adjusting to the bigger European surface.

"We're starting to throw the puck around out there like we should be, Smith remarked. "We're not playing the robot hockey we have been used to back home. You just can't get away with that type of play over here any more."

Canadian netminder Jim Rutheford played another strong game, but the Detroit Red Wings' goalie admits the Soviets are probably one of the most precise teams he's faced.

And while he was impressed by the quickness with which the Soviet shooters got their shots off, "they still don't shoot as hard as the Finns."

Rutherford also said a couple of breaks might have changed things around.

The breaks he spoke of were deflected shots — Bilyaletdinov's goal that changed direction off a Canadian skate and a breakaway miss by Wilf Paiement midway through the third period that came just before Petrov put the game out of reach with his second goal.

"They got the breaks and we didn't", said Rutherford.

DISGRUNTLED fans at Exhibition Stadium in Toronto went home grumbling "we was robbed" as the Pearson Cup game between Toronto Blue Jays and Montreal Expos Thursday was called after 10½ innings with the score tied 4-4. Game was called to enable Expos to catch a plane. (CP wirephoto).

Expos-Jays Rivalry Heated Up By Fans

Times News Services

Officials of both Montreal Expos and Toronto Blue Jays have said they want to create a high-level rivalry between Canada's two major league baseball cities. They couldn't have topped what happened Thursday in Toronto.

The Expos and Blue Jays battled to a 4-4 draw after 10½ innings in the annual Pearson Cup exhibition game that sent most of the 21,564 fans at Exhibition Stadium home grumbling about how "we was robbed."

The game was called at 7:15 p.m. EST as the Blue Jays' Dave McKay stepped to the plate to lead off the bottom of the 11th. McKay already had three hits on the night.

The curfew was necessary to allow the Expos to catch a commercial flight at 8:50 p.m. to Chicago for a day game Friday against the Cubs. All games at Chicago's Wrigley Field are played during the day because the park has no lights.

The curfew had been agreed upon by both teams prior to the game, but not announced to the crowd until the 10th inning.

When Montreal appeared to deliberately delay the start of the Jays' half of the 11th for about three minutes until the curfew took effect, the fans took exception.

Helmeted riot police had to be called to control the crowd outside the stadium. It took about 30 minutes before the unhappy fans dispersed.

Meanwhile, in the American League, California Angels extended their winning streak to eight games by defeating Minnesota Twins 8-6, rookie righthander Chuck Rainey pitched Boston Red Sox to a 5-3 victory over Milwaukee Brewers and New York Yankees' four-game winning streak was snapped by Baltimore Orioles who beat them, 6-3.

Wheat Kings Whip Broncos

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Brandon Wheat Kings established their supremacy early and skated to a 6-1 victory over Lethbridge Broncos in a Western Hockey League playoff semifinal game Thursday night before 4,461 fans.

The Wheat Kings, Eastern Division champions, built up a 6-0 lead mid-way through the second period as they bounced the Broncos, who won the Central Division title. The victory gives the Wheat Kings a 1-0 record in the three-team round-robin to determine the finalists.

The Wheat Kings visit Portland Winter Hawks tonight and the Broncos are in the Oregon city on Saturday.

Ray Allison led the Wheat Kings with three goals, Steve Patrick chipped in two and Brian Propp added the other. Gord Williams was the only Lethbridge marksman.

Brandon fired 39 shots at Lee Pickett and Greg Dumba, while Rick Knickle faced 25 Lethbridge shots. The teams split 14 minors penalties and two majors.

Canada Wins Over France

PERTH (Reuter) — A last-minute goal by right back Alan Hobkirk gave Canada a 2-1 win over France in the Group A match of the World Field Hockey Tournament today.

Canada led 1-0 at half time through Hobkirk, who blasted in from only the second short corner.

Hawks Hope To Snap Dismal Playoff Streak

By The Canadian Press

Even when they were healthy, Chicago Black Hawks scarcely ranked as favorites to win the Stanley Cup. And the lowest-ranking survivors in the National Hockey League playoffs are far from healthy.

Their most experienced forward and defenceman, Stan Mikita and Keith Magnuson, have been missing for some time. More recently, the Chicgo casualty list has been augmented by defenceman Doug Wilson and forwards Grant Mulvey and — as of Wednesday — Ted Bulley.

The Hawks, struggling to end a string of 14 consecutive playoff losses, accomplished a feat that few NHL teams have matched this season when they kept the Islanders' Bryan Trottier-Mike Bossy-Clark Gillies line off the score sheet for 60 minutes Wednesday.

Only flaw in the performance was that nobody did any scoring at either end of the ice. The game went into overtime and Bossy, with his 10th goal in four games and his 73rd of the season, broke it up after 2½ minutes.

New York Islanders, who have a two-game lead in their best-of-seven quarterfinal, a 43-point edge over the Hawks in the final NHL standings and, in the eyes of most experts, the team most likely to deny Montreal Canadiens their fourth stright Stanley Cup, have no absentees from their regular lineup.

Boston Bruins, nagged by injuries all season, got everyone back just in time for their series with Pittsburgh Penguins, who have been without veteran centre Pete Mahovlich for the last 20 games of the regular season. Boston takes a 2-0 series lead into Pittsburgh.

Meanwhile New York Rangers entertain Philadelphia Flyers with their series tied 1-1 and key personnel missing from both teams.

Bernie Parent, the goaltender who was largely responsible for the Flyers' Stanley Cup victories in 1974 and 1975, is out for the season with a serious eye injury. The Rangers are missing Ulf Nilsson, their high-scoring Swedish centre, and Jocelyn Guevremont, the seasoned defenceman they obtained from Buffalo late in the season.

Wounded pride is the chief affliction of Toronto Maple Leafs, who come home Saturday for a pair of weekend games with the Canadiens after losing 5-2 and 5-1 in Montreal.

The Flyers gave no indication whether rookie Robbie Moore, who was pulled from the nets during their 7-1 loss to the Rangers Wednesday after being unbeaten in his first seven NHL appearances, whould be back in goal tonight.

The Rangers, for their part, have not beaten Philadelphia in their last 10 meetings at Madison Square Garden and were unimpressed by the margin of Wednesday's victory.

Future Bright For Cougars

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Now that this one is finally over, the next hockey season should be the prime concern.

It "should be" but Victoria Cougar coach Jack Shupe doesn't anticipate any drastic rebuilding worries for at least two years "because every good hockey player in the country will be an 18-year-old next season."

Perhaps more than their share.

Also manager and part owner of the Western Hockey League club, finalists in the Western Division for the last two campaigns, Shupe appraised Victoria's future with definite optimism.

There is no concern for the future because of the 17-year-olds on the Victoria roster, said Shupe. "We had five (Barry Pederson, Tony Feltrin, Torrie Robertson, Brad Palmer and Robert Jacobson) who were regulars. There isn't another team in the league that had the quality and quantity that we had in that area."

With 19 being the limit, exclusive of one allowable overage (20) player, it means the Cougars will have a solid nucleus for two years.

In addition to the five regulars, winger Brad Yachimec, centre Darryl Coldwell and defenceman Ryan McAdams were other 17-year-olds who finished out the season with Victoria, along with 16-year-old Len Dawes of Nanaimo, after Victoria's affiliate players were knocked out of tier two junior playoffs.

Four — goaltender Kevin Eastman, defenceman Mark Robinson and wingers Greg Adams and Bob Jansch — will return as 19-year-olds. It means the 13 will form the nucleus for next season's team.

★ ★ ★

"You don't replace guys like Lupul and Robertson very easily," said Shupe. "But we do have players, big guys, who could take over."

Among Victoria's properties are 6-2 centre Terry Sedoryk of Edmonton, 6-1 centre Dave Robinson of Nanaimo, centre Dave Bourne of Red Deer, 6-1 right winger Grant Rezansoff of Delta and left winger Mike Ebberly of Edmonton. All will be 18-year-olds next season.

As well, Shupe is high on 16-year-old Bob McGill, a 6-1 defenceman who played for Abbotsford, and 15-year-old winger Mark Morrison of Delta.

Centre strength is such that Shupe intends to play Palmer at left wing, along with Torrie Robertson and Adams. The only problem may be at right wing, with Jansch and Yachimec the only candidates. Shupe feels, however, that Coldwell, a right-hand shot, and Rezansoff may solve the right side problem.

Otherwise, says Shupe, there "shouldn't be" any problems.

Budgets in Test Against Seaboard

Victoria Budgets will have three of their four pitchers on hand Saturday for their second exhibition softball doubleheader of the season.

Dave Ruthowsky, back with the Northwest International Fastball League club after spending a year in Ontario, has returned to his home province for a week-long visit before Budgets open their league schedule April 28 against Seattle Woodenville.

However, coach Harvey Stevenson will have Andy Konopacki, Dave Wilson and newcomer Mark Smith on hand to pitch when Budgets take on Seaboard Construction of the Stuffy McGinnis League, the defending Western Canadian senior "B" champions, in a doubleheader starting at 12:30 p.m. at Royal Athletic Park.

Budgets won both ends of their first exhibition doubleheader against Sooke All-Stars last weekend, 6-0 and 5-2.

One Ticket: $15,177.60

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — A $2 exacta bet — picking the winner and second horse in a race — provided a record $15,177.60 payoff at Evangeline Downs, Thursday. One ticket was sold on the 11-2 combination.

NATIONAL COACH WANTS CONCENTRATION ON OLYMPICS

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

National coach Don McCrae thinks professional basketball for women is a great idea; he just doesn't want his players used as guinea pigs.

McCrae is running a Canadian squad of 15 through its paces twice daily at UVic's McKinnon Gym preparatory to the world women's basketball championships starting next week in Korea.

He and the national team leave for Seoul next Tuesday and play their first tournament game there April 29 against the host Koreans before an expected crowd of 20,000.

McCrae has all of last year's nationals back despite interest in two of his players from a newly formed professional circuit in the U.S. — the Women's Basketball League that began play in January with franchises in New York, New Jersey, Iowa, Milwaukee, Houston, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Dayton, Ohio.

Last October McCrae was contacted by Al Cissorsky, coach of the New Jersey Gems. Cissorsky told him he was interested in centre Sylvia Sweeney, a first-string national from Laurentian University in Sudbury, and "a girl on the west coast named Carol."

That was Carol Turney, a 5'8" starting guard who starred for UVic Vikettes two seasons ago.

McCrae, who also coached the University of Waterloo Warriors men's team to an Ontario conference crown this spring, wasn't impressed by Cissorsky's pitch.

"He indicated a girl would get $100 a game, a free uniform, free travel and a part-time job. I considered those figures insulting and I told him so.

"I told him that I would recommend to any girl I talked to that she stay away from his league for one year and preferrably two, at least until the league is established. I don't want them to go and be guinea pigs. It's not worth giving up an education or amateur status."

Nor was McCrae happy with the experience of a former Canadian national, Liz Silcott of Montreal.

"Liz went down to Dayton for what was advertised as a free-agent tryout for the entire league, but when she got there they tried to sign her as a chattel to the Dayton club."

The league got off the ground in January and is playing an abbreviated schedule this year.

The people behind it are the same ones that organized the defunct American Basketball Association, McCrae said.

"They have a real Madison Avenue mentality in relation to their organization," he added. "For example, one of their first moves was to hold a draft, including seven-foot-two Ludwiga Semenova from Russia and several top U.S. players. Of course, none of them have signed.

"They're averaging only about 2,000 a game and attendance is falling off. "Still, I think the league will try to survive at almost any cost until after 1980 when a lot of the top players will be finished with their Olympic aspirations. (The 1980 Olympics are in Moscow.) That would make a lot of the best players available and they're obviously hoping that will give them a boost."

Understandably, McCrae isn't optimistic about the league's survival but if it succeeds, he'd like to see some of the Canadian players get involved.

"I'm only opposed to seeing our girls get themselves into a jackpot with a league that fails," he explained. "If the league stabilizes, that's different. If she can make good money and have some security, there's no reason for a player not going."

One of his nationals, starting guard Chris Critelli of St. Catharines, Ont., has expressed interest in turning pro, but not until after 1980 and the Olympics.

"And she told me there's no way she's going to make a move in that direction until after she gets her education," McCrae added. Critelli attends Old Dominion University in Virginia.

Turney, meanwhile, may miss the trip to Korea because of a weight loss caused by flu. "There's a definite chance she may not make it," McCrae confirmed. "Hopefully, we'll know by this weekend."

Canada is grouped in "A" pool of the 12-team tournament with Korea, Bolivia and Holland. The top two finishers from each of the three pools join the defending champion U.S. team in a seven-team round-robin that concludes May 13.

After playing Korea April 29, the Canadians meet Bolivia May 1 and Holland May 2. Korea and Canada are favored to advance.

Fishermen Braving Wind Enjoy Fairly Good Catches

Some windy weather during the past week kept many salmon fishermen off the water but those that got out came home with fair catches from many spots around Vancouver Island.

Most Sooke catches, however, have been blues to four pounds along with a few chinooks to eight taken on strip or minnow at any depth off Secretary Island.

Off Becher Bay, numerous blues and a few chinooks to 19 pounds are grabbing strip, minnow or pale blue or white hootchies trolled with 60 to 80 feet of line and two pounds of weight. Best spots have been near the Bedfords, Aldridge Point and Beechey Head.

Chinooks to 18.5 pounds and blues to four make up a fifty-fifty catch off Pedder Bay in the vicinity of William Head, the Kelp Bed and between Race Passage and Church Island. Tom Macks, Silver Harvest luminous octopus, strip and large minnows trolled from depths of 60 to 120 feet are taking the top catches. Some of the blues have also been caught on the surface.

Chris Lamb and his fishing partner, J. Allan, landed two hefty halibut within a span of 15 minutes just after lunch Monday near Race Rocks. Lamb's lunker tipped the scales at 75 pounds and Allan's catch weighed in at 50 pounds.

Fishing is good off Oak Bay with chinooks to 15 pounds and "lots of blues" coming in from Chatham, Discovery and Trial islands as well as in The Gap and on Constance Bank. Best results were noted on Krippled-Ks and Deadly Dicks.

Pink octopus and Krippled-Ks are landing limits of chinooks to five pounds about 200 to 300 feet out from Wain Rock. Fish on the surface early in the morning and drop down to a depth of 60 feet later in the day.

Only a few small blues relieve an otherwise "so-so" catch in the middle part of Saanich Inlet.

Spotty returns of chinooks to 16 pounds were reported in Finlayson Arm from Goldstream Island to Chesterfield Rock using plugs, hootchies and Squirts trolled with about 150 feet of wire line and planer.

Chinooks to 10 pounds are providing fair catches on green and white, blue and white or all-white hootchies trolled at depths between 200 and 300 feet off Five Fingers, Snake Island, Northwest Bay and Entrance Island near Nanaimo. Numerous blues to 2.5 pounds may be found in nearly all Nanaimo waters using any type of lure containing red fished at just about any depth.

The Bamfield side of Alberni Inlet is yielding chinooks to 30 pounds on strip or white hootchies trolled at the 60-foot depth.

Courtenay fishermen are picking up numerous blues off the south end of Hornby Island, near Bates Beach and offshore from Comox.

A run of chinooks to 25 pounds showed up off Willow Point near Campbell River in recent days to end a quiet period. Most success has been on slowly-trolled bucktails during the early morning.

Steelheading has been tapering off for the past few weeks but Dave Rees of Victoria has managed to consistantly click in Harris Creek and the Big Qualicum.

A few steelhead have also been landed in the Campbell.

Trout fishermen who had their appetites whetted by the unseasonable warm weather last month will now have to wait until this cool weather disappears in order to expect reasonable success.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

Mann Leads

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Bob Mann shot an eight-under-par 64 Thursday to take the first-round lead in the $100,000 Tallahassee Open golf tournament.

"I think you'll find, Sir, our brochure says 'safe beach.' You must have gone into the water."

Driving Key Says Watson

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — The deep, deep rough and small greens demand the most accurate drives, Tom Watson said after taking the first-round lead in the $300,000 Tournament of Champions.

"The course demands good iron shots," Watson said after firing a three-under-par 69 Thursday. "But driving is paramount. Because of the rough, you absolutely have to drive it in the fairway.

"If you don't, you can find some lies out there that only Tarzan and Jane can play out of."

The rough is up higher than usual on the tough, 6,889-yard La Costa Country Club course and, Watson said, the greens have been reduced in size and are extremely hard.

"They're the hardest greens in the world to chip to," said the man who has won player-of-the-year honors the last two seasons.

"But, in my opinion, you've got to drive it in the fairway to have any chance to win the golf tournament."

One shot off the lead with a 70 was Ron Streck, 24, who got into the elite, 28-man field off his only pro victory in the San Antonio-Texas Open last fall and has been in a slump ever since.

Tied at 71, and the only others under par, were defending champion Gary Player of South Africa, Ray Floyd, Mexican Victor Regalado and Gil Morgan.

Jack Nicklaus, who has won a record five times in this event that brings together the winners of regular tour titles from the last 12 months, topped a strong group at par 72.

Speedway Opener Postponed

Western Speedway's 1979 season will get underway one week later than expected in order to put finishing touches on the new $250,000 grandstand facility.

The public will get its first chance to see the new stands, washrooms and concessions May 5 during a season-opening program of super-stock, stock car and jalopy racing.

Speedway manager Tony Mortel had announced the season would open Apr. 28 but said more time was needed to complete the larger and much better-equipped steel and cement structure that replaced the 25-year-old wooden grandstand.

Legion To Dress Vets Against Irish

Esquimalt Legion of the Western Canada Major Junior "A" Lacrosse League will have 15 holdovers in the lineup when they meet Victoria Shamrocks of the Western Lacrosse Association in an exhibition game at Esquimalt Sports Centre, Saturday at 8 p.m.

Among those returning will be goalkeepers Bill Thomas and Mike Duch.

Duch, it will be recalled, left the club in mid season last year but has asked to return this year and has been accepted. A rookie netminder with the club this year is Russ Urlacher of the Juan de Fuca Intermediates.

Others returning from last year are Jeff Whitney-Griffiths, Rhys Wicks and Paul Michael, all of whom saw some action with the Shamrocks last season; Ray Pallan, Mike Game, Mark Roberts, Jim Boyd, Tarey Pollock, Brian Bell, Ed van Dyk, Wayne Reeve, Terry Jay and Ken Murray.

Newcomers with the team are Norm Tapping and Steve Beer, Esq-Vic Jr. B; Bruce Alexander, Saanich Intermediates; Dave Angrove, Russ Kennedy, Kelly Bryant and Ron Westwood, Esq-Vic Intermediates; and Steve Hanna of Saanich Jr. B.

Murray McLaren, a holdover, has not yet reported to camp.

New coach Ken Alexander, who coached Nanaimo Timbermen of the WLA last year, plans to dress all the players with the esception of Kelly Bryant and Ken Murray, who are suffering from injuries.

So far, Quebec has an overwhelming 31-2 goals for-against total. Ontario, represented by St. Michael's College Buzzers, and Ottawa also have three straight wins.

Buzzers ran up a 5-2 win over Thunder Bay and Ottawa had a 5-2 victory over Prince Edward Island, which now has one win and two losses.

Saskatchewan, represented by Notre Dame Hounds of Wilcox, edged British Columbia, 3-2. Goaltender Kelly Dobbyn of Victoria was outstanding in the third period to help the victory for Saskatchewan, which also has Victorians Steve LaPointe and David O'Brien in its lineup.

B.C., represented by the North Shore Winter Club of Vancouver, and Saskatchewan both have 2-1 won-loss records.

In other games Manitoba tripped Alberta 5-3 and Newfoundland downed Nova Scotia, 4-2.

This oil-fired, forced air system uses a better mixture of air and oil vapour for more complete combustion. And because the mixture is also recycled, you get more heat out of every drop of oil.
If your old furnace works at 66% efficiency, for example, Econoblue could reduce oil consumption by 20%. This means if you now use 750 gallons of fuel a year, Econoblue could save you 150 gallons.
So, if your furnace has been showing signs of age lately, don't wait until it gives up altogether.

A START ON HOW TO BE COMPETENT ON THE WATER

For Rookie Seamen, A Boating Clinic

AROUND OUR SHORES

If you're a rookie at the boating game four hours spent at Spectrum senior secondary school next Tuesday night could well get you started toward becoming a competent seaman.

The Victoria Power Squadron, free of charge, will be putting on a safe boating clinic from 7 to 11 p.m. which will include displays, safety equipment, correct fueling procedures, rules of the road and films.

The squadron's administrative officer Glead Weidner says, although it will be a pretty busy session with some of the squadron's top-notch members acting as teachers, the course is not designed to turn out experts at the end of four hours. But it will give an idea of how much there is to learn and Glead is hoping the clinic will act as an appetiser for the 20-week boating course the squadron will be offering again this fall and winter.

Don't let the name fool you. Glead says power squadron courses are just as popular with rag-haulers as they are with stink-potters (both affectionate terms) and out of the 125 who graduated this year, about half were preparing themselves for sailboat-handling.

This is the second year that the squadron has put on a safe boating clinic. Glead says 250 would be a good number to handle during the four hours. The clinic was so popular last year that 265 turned up.

In view of this if you are interested it would be smart to phone CJVI at 382-0900 as soon as possible to make sure you have a spot.

You don't have to be a boater to appreciate the action that will take place on the Cowichan River this weekend during the fifth annual Cowichan River Spring Slalom Race.

Dozens of racers from Vancouver Island, the lower Mainland and other parts of the Pacific Northwest will assemble Saturday at the S-Turn, a rapid located a few kilometres downstream from Skutz Falls.

Slalom competition gets under way at 1 p.m. Saturday. This year the race will be one of two team selection races which will decide who will represent British Columbia at the world championships, to be held in July at Jonquiere, Que.

It will be the first year world competition has been held in North America and the result is expected to be an even greater interest in whitewater canoe and kayak racing.

This weekend's events will culminate with a whitewater race through the Cowichan Canyon on Sunday, beginning at 11 a.m. The race will be for both open Canadian canoes and closed boats and should be a dandy, the Cowichan offering the best water on Vancouver Island for this sort of competition.

★ ★ ★

The local Victoria Canoe Club is bound to have some competitors on the Cowichan River this weekend but for those who want a more quiet Sunday Howie Routh is arranging a paddle along the Koksilah and Cowichan estuaries.

Those interested should gather in the Helmcken Road parking area at 10:30 a.m. For more details give Howie a ring at 477-4879.

There will be plenty of activity in waters off Sidney on Saturday when the Canoe Bay Sailing Club holds its annual single-handed invitational 10½-mile Sidney Channel Race, which will begin at 11 a.m. in the vicinity of the government wharf at the bottom of Beacon Avenue.

There were 43 boats in last year's race and Peter White expects the numbers to increase this year. If you haven't yet registered you can still give Peter a ring tonight at 656-1613.

There will be six prizes up for grabs, one for cruising class boats only, and others for Solings, Stars and other racing types. The prize-giving will take place at the Sidney Hotel on completion of the race.

The club will have another race on Sunday, thia time a 17-miler to Russell Island and back. The boats will get their start gun at 9:30 a.m. off Sidney.

Thirty-two boats took part in the club's 18-miler to Zero Rock and back, which was won by Larry Mofford's Main Brace. After her came Jim Morris's Madeleine, Peter White's White Squall, Bent Jespersen's Polyestermite, John Barker's Interlude, Herb Roberts' Bijou a Moi, Daryl Foster's Tzonqua, Gordie Inglis' Water Mellon, Bill Martin's Georgia Girl and Gerry Guest's Auriga.

There will be lots to watch at Cadboro Bay this weekend when the city's Thunderbirds hold their fleet championships. The sailors hope to get in five races, things getting under way at 10 a.m. both Saturday and Sunday. Competition will be keen because the top boats will respresent Victoria in the world championships, to be held during July in Vancouver.

The Catalina 27s will have another middle-distance race on Saturday. This could be from 10 to 15 miles, depending on wind conditions, and will start at 10 a.m. in Cadboro Bay.

Also on Saturday, the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's dinghy sailors will have the last of their Series F racing. Rupert Holmes-Smith has won all of the three races sailed so far, the first time edging out Bob Britten and Dave Richardson. Finishing after him in the next two races were Barry Wright and Mike Turner.

The silverware was pretty well spread around the Pacific Northwest when the six-race Hobie Cat International Regatta ended in the Esquimalt Lagoon area on Sunday.

Paul Ulibarri of Seattle won in Hobie 18s, runners-up being Dave Carpenter, also of Seattle, and Steve Martin of Vancouver. Charlie Brown of Seattle won in Hobie 16A competition, being followed by Dean Froome of Hawaii and Keith Battersby of Victoria.

Dave Smyth of Vancouver was top Hobie 16B sailor, runners-up being Neil Trowbridge and Mike Burgess of Victoria. Wayne Schafer of Los Angeles won in Hobie 14s. Eric Jespersen of Victoria came second and also won the trophy for top-ranking local sailor. Third in 14s was Ron Rubadeau of Kelowna.

There were 50 boats in the competition, first of its kind to be held in this area.

General Assembly Favored in Wood

NEW YORK (AP) — General Assembly drew the tough outside post Thursday against 12 rivals for the $125,000-added Wood Memorial Stakes at Aqueduct but was installed as the 5-2 early-line favorite for Saturday's final Eastern 1 1-8 mile prep for the May 5 Kentucky Derby.

The son of Secretariat, who won his last start in the Gotham on April 7 after five straight setbacks, is owned by Bert Firestone, trained by LeRoy Jolley and will be ridden by Jacinto Vasquez.

Three of General Assembly's losses came last year. He finished second twice to Spectacular Bid, the Derby favorite, as a two-year-old.

Ryehill Farm's Smarten was listed at 4-1. He was among four non-Derby eligibles in the field. The others were Belle's Gold, winner of the Bay Shore, 8-1; Breezing On, 20-1, and Hedgegrow, 30-1.

Flying Zee Stable has an entry of Screen King and Four Kids Only, rated at 5-1.

Riders Get Jones From Ticats

OTTAWA (CP) — With quarterback Tom Clements champing to play in the National Football League, Ottawa Rough Riders covered their flanks Thursday by acquiring Jimmy Jones from Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Clements and Condredge Holloway combined as the most potent quarterbacking pair in the Canadian Football League last season — Clements the iron-armed passer and Holloway the breakaway rollout artist.

But the Riders, had to give up a pair of classy youngsters — wide receiver Bill Hatanaka and defensive tackle Mike Riley — to get Jones a 28-year-old veteran of Montreal Alouettes and the Ticats since coming to Canada from the University of Southern California.

Hatanaka, a slight, 24-year-old graduate of York University, has been unable to crack the starting Rider lineup despite some brilliant performances on punt and kickoff returns.

In fact it was his work against Saskatchewan Roughriders in the 1976 Grey Cup that made a fan of Hamilton coach John Payne.

Hatanaka watched from the sidelines most of last season, after suffering several broken ribs and a punctured lung.

Payne was coaching Saskatchewan when Ottawa beat them in the 1976 national final. Payne already has replaced Jones with Ed Smith, signed last month from Michigan State University.

St. Mikes Capture Junior Rugby Crown

St. Michael's University School blanked Oak Bay 18-0 Thursday to win its third straight Greater Victoria junior high school rugby title at Windsor Park.

Bill Laturnus, Henry Song, Clive Mulden and Neil Antolin, who also kicked a convert, each scored a try for St. Michael's.

St. Michael's now advances to the Vancouver Island championships scheduled next week at Claremont.

Injured Jockey Files $5M Suit

BALTIMORE (AP) — A $5-million lawsuit has been filed on behalf of jockey Karin Yarosh, who was seriously injured in a fall at Pimlico Race Course three years ago.

Jockey Barry Sasser, who was involved in the spill, was named as the defendant and was cited in the suit for "careless and negligent riding."

Yarosh was described by her lawyers as "totally disabled," with a draining wound in her side which requires hospital treatment two or three times a month.

After the spill, she underwent surgery for removal of her gall bladder and part of her liver. She also suffered six broken ribs and a punctured lung.

Yarosh was attempting to move through a tight spot on the rail when her mount collided with the rear of Sasscer's horse and went down. She was then trampled by the horses behind her.

After the race, stewards disqualified Sasscer's mount for bumping, but the next day they reversed their decision and exonerated Sasscer of any wrongdoing.

At the time of the spill, Yarosh contended male jockeys had been threatening to "drop" her. Sasscer has denied the charge, and claims he is being used as a fall guy for what are the hazards of the profession.

The suit was filed in Baltimore supreme bench April 6, a day before the three-year statute of limitations would have expired.

Yarosh previously filed workmen's compensation claims against Pimlico and the owner of the horse, in order to recover medical expenses. The claims have not yet been heard in court.

Incompetence, Wrong Attitude Hurts Hockey

Problems Start at the Top With Owners and Managers

Bobby Hull, who played only four games this season with Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association before announcing his retirement, is a longtime foe of hockey violence. In this story, specially written for The Canadian Press, he offers his assessment of the game and how it could be reformed.

★

Written for Canadian Press
By BOBBY HULL

Hockey's biggest problem is that we have the wrong attitude toward the game.

At the root of it all is the approach of owners, general managers and coaches who hire mediocre players and send them out on the ice to intimidate and destroy.

It hasn't just happened. It has been brewing for a number of years. With expansion of the National Hockey League and the formation of the World Hockey Association have come people who don't understand the game.

Some individuals who own franchises didn't know what it took to put a good team together. They hired incompetent general managers who snowed them into believing they were going to build a winner.

These general managers hired coaches with the same faults. And the players they chose were a reflection of the men who hired them.

Not that it's the players' fault. They're told that it doesn't matter whether they ever score or assist on a goal; their job is to intimidate. And unless they do as they're told, they're not going to play.

What really bothers me about some players is that they don't realize they're being used, not for the betterment of the game or for their own good, but for the survival of the coach.

Players without natural talent and lacking knowledge of such basics as skating, passing, shooting, thinking and positional play go from one team to another until finally they wear out their welcome.

It's not only coaching in the major leagues that is to blame. It's also in junior hockey, especially in the Western Canada League, where there are coaches who don't know how to teach the basics and therefore resort to intimidation.

And it doesn't matter what kind of club you have, a great club, even the Montreal Canadiens as great as they are. If a team goes out to constantly intimidate and destroy individuals like Guy Lafleur, it's going to be mediocre hockey.

We're in the entertainment business and we aren't entertaining the people. That's why we don't have full buildings.

The trouble with these attitudes is that they are contagious. Kids are only a product of their environment. They see us pros doing it and they think that's the way hockey should be played.

BOBBY HULL
. . . speaking out

If they see pros clear the benches and brawl, they think: "Well, they're the best at their business so that's the way it should be done."

But it could all be changed if coaches at that level had control of their teams. If, at the beginning of the season and before every practice and game, they were to insist that the kids concentrate on skating, passing, shooting, thinking and playing their positions, and forget about intimidating, things like this wouldn't happen.

The coaches could make it clear what would happen if anyone got out of line. And the idea that grown men can't control kids 10 to 16 is a lot of malarkey.

The fact is that many coaches don't care to control their players. When they put that patch on their arm they switch from Dr. Jekyll to Mr. Hyde and suddenly it's not a sport anymore for the kids — it's win at any cost.

So we have to screen our coaches to the point where we know they're going to go into the dressing room and tell their players: "You're going to go out there and make the opposition skate better, pass better, think better, position themselves better and shoot better to beat us."

It used to be that there wasn't room in our game for players who couldn't execute the basics. A player who couldn't pass, skate or think would be passed over.

The growth of professional hockey has increased the number of jobs, but it's not true that there aren't enough good players to go round. Despite talk about the talent of the Russians, Czechs, Swedes, Finns, we still have the best hockey players.

The difference is that the Europeans have the right attitude. They concentrate on the basics; we go out to intimidate. If we decided we were going to outskate and out-manoeuvre them we could do it much better.

But you can't change in midstream. It takes time. The Soviet victory in the three-game series against the best of the NHL proved it.

The place to start is at the midget and bantam midget level. By the time they're ready to turn pro I'm sure hockey will be back on the right track. But the leadership must come from the pros. Once they get the message it will filter down.

It would help if professional teams returned to sponsoring junior clubs. The pros would hire the coaches and they could groom the youngsters to play the kind of hockey that emphasizes skills.

One result would be that players who aren't big but who can manoeuvre, skate and execute will stick around instead of quitting because they can't compete with bruisers who constantly ram them into the boards.

There are a lot of kids who mature slowly. They play the game for fun but find it's not. They say: "What the heck, I'm not going to beat my head through the boards." If they were to continue, they might develop into talented players. But they fall by the wayside. And who wins? The stronger, bigger and less talented.

I don't know whether hockey coaching certification programs are the right approach. I can have a patch on my arm or a certificate that says I'm the greatest thing since sliced bread. But if I'm not, then I can't get the job done.

Good hockey people are going to have to say: "This guy has the wrong attitude and we don't want him looking after our kids; this guy has the right attitude, he can coach our junior teams and groom our kids for professional hockey."

What's important is who is doing the certifying, whether the right things are being considered. A man may be meek and mild at home but become a tyrant when he coaches a bunch of kids.

Kids have enough pressure — at home, at school, in society. They should be able to enjoy sports without unnecessary pressure. But in hockey, as well as baseball and football, the coaches may do nothing more than confuse.

When we were kids we got to the rink two minutes before the game, in time to get our equipment on and skate around a couple of times. Then the referee blew the whistle and the coach said: "OK, you go in goal, you and you on defence, you, you and you play on the forward line, and the rest of you get in the box here and we'll figure it out from there."

The guys who could skate grabbed the puck and skated with it. Those who couldn't skate quite so well checked to get the puck to the guy who could. It was a matter of doing what came naturally. We didn't have any pressure on us.

Now my kids are out at 6:30 before school. They've got blackboards out and the coaches are saying: "You've got to do this and you've got to do something else."

At the game the parents are hollering one thing at the kids, the coaches are telling them another and the referees something else. The players just don't know what to do. The fun is gone. And I think we have to get it back. Because you can't do anything well unless you're enjoying it.

But the changes won't come from one or two individuals. Everyone has to join in. And they have to learn to stand up to the intimidating attitude of some coaches.

Some people may interpret this to mean I want to eliminate bodychecking. I've been hit more time than most people ever think of getting hit. I don't want to take the good, hard hitting out of the game.

One thing that may help get the game back on track is the merger between the NHL and WHA. It means 40 fewer positions for ill-talented players providing, of course, the right players are chosen. And that's a start.

It has taken less than a dozen years to get hockey into its present difficulties. The problems began some time after the first NHL expansion in 1967.

I think we can get it back in only a few years. And even one year will make a big difference if the right people speak up and have their way.

'FOR THE GOOD OF AUTO RACING'

Feud Must End: Sneva

TOM SNEVA
. . . time for compromise

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The feud between Championship Auto Racing Teams and the U.S. Auto Club must be resolved for the good of the sport, says defending USAC national champion Tom Sneva.

"What you have now is both sides unwilling to compromise," the driver said from his Spokane, Wash., home. "But the way to get things done is to work together. Now, it's the spectator who is getting hurt. And he's the guy we have to consider."

Speeds at this year's Indianapolis 500-mile race might not come anywhere near Sneva's record of 202 miles an hour because of a recent USAC rule change that will affect the horsepower and the speeds.

But Sneva says the 500 will still be an exciting show to watch.

"If you take 95 percent of the spectators, they don't know what kind of car you're running; they just know if the race is close and competitive," said Sneva.

The rule change is one of the major points raised by CART, the group of car owners and drivers who broke with USAC last year and then threatened to boycott the 500 unless it was given more control.

Sneva, whose car owner Jerry O'Connell of San Jose, Calif., is aligned with CART, said the change was not a major concern with him.

"I think in the past we've seen that as we've restricted horsepower, we've had better racing. And we've got to be entertaining. That's got to be our prime concern. To me, 50 inches is going to be a tremendous show to watch. It's going to equalize a lot of things."

The Speedway announced Tuesday that a record 103 cars have been nominated for the 33-car starting field. The lineup will be determined in two weekends of time trials in May.

THREE BREAK SPANISH COURSE MARK

TORREGUEBRADA, Spain (Reuter) — Martin Poxon of Britain, South African Hugh Baiocchi and Jose Maria Canizares of Spain all clipped a stroke off the course record with 67s to share the first-round lead in the Spanish Open golf championship Thursday.

Tommy Horton of Britain had a four-under-par 68, while Gar Hamilton of Toronto shot a 73.

South Koreans Rejected Again

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The South Korean Table Tennis Association has failed in a new bid to obtain visas for next week's world championships in Pyongyang, the capital of its North Korean neighbor.

After a 30-minute meeting outside the North Korean mission, association spokesman Chung Choo-Nyun said the North Koreans had "once again refused to issue the visas and had merely repeated the need for a unified north-south team."

HARTFORD, Conn. (CP) — The World Hockey Association's final statistics released Thursday confirmed Real Cloutier of Quebec Nordiques as winner of the league's last scoring championship.

Cloutier, who also won the scoring title in 1976-77, joined team-mate Marc Tardif and Andre Lacroix of New England Whalers as two-time winners of the Hunter Trophy.

Mike Walton, now back in the National Hockey League, was the only other scoring champion in the WHA's seven-year history.

The WHA will go out of existence when four clubs join the NHL for the 1979-80 season and the remaining two teams — Cincinnati and Birmingham — close up shop.

Cloutier collected a total of 75 goals and 54 assists for 129 points to easily outdistance runner-up Robbie Ftorek of Cincinnati in the 1978-79 race. Ftorek had 39 goals and 77 assists for 116 points.

Bruins Drop Team

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League say they are dropping their top farm club, Rochester Americans of the American Hockey League.

The Bruins said they planned to announce soon where their new farm club will be located.

Debbie Tops Citrus

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Debbie Meisterlin, who says she can't putt, fired a six-under-par 67 to take the first-round lead in the Lady Citrus women's golf tournament Thursday.

"I made some real good putts, but I also hit some lousy ones," said the blue-eyed, 26-year-old Meisterlin. "I could have shot 10 under if I had been putting good. But it was the easiest six-under I ever shot."

Four strokes back at 71 on the 6,209-yard, par-73 Rio Pinar course were Connie Chillemi and Debbie Massey, the 1977 Ladies Professional Golf Association rookie of the year.

Twelve players were bunched at one-under-par 72, including Sally Little, Sandra Palmer, Hollis Stacy and rookie Beth Daniel.

JoAnne Carner, winner of three tour events this year, was at 73 along with Dot Germain and veterans Marlene Hagge and Kathy Cornelius.

Sandra Post, formerly of Oakville, Ont., also shot a 73. The pre-tournament favorite won the last LPGA event, the Winners Circle in Palm Springs, Calif.

The five-foot-three, 117-pound Meisterlin, a non-winner in her fourth year on the circuit, has had severe back problems which she blames for inhibiting her putting stance.

But she birdied her first hole Thursday and was three under after four holes.

Among her seven birdies was a 40-footer on the 355-yard, par-four third hole, and a 20-footer on the par-four sixth.

Thirteen golfers were bunched at one-over-par 74 and 11 were at 75.

Potlatch On, Life's Been Full

Elsie Sutherland, now a keen curler

It's all behind her now!

School days and growing up in Ashcroft, early training as a nurse in New Westminster, stints aboard a hospital ship and a troop ship during the Second World War and years in the nursing profession in this province, as a hospital matron — and latterly instructing students in operating room techniques at Royal Jubilee Hospital, a position she held until retirement.

Those experiences are neatly pigeon-holed in Elsie Sutherland's memory and that's where she prefers to keep them.

Nevertheless, if you do get her reminiscing over a cup of tea in her comfortable home — as I was lucky enough to do recently — its a fascinating story.

Miss Sutherland was born, one of twin girls, at Alert Bay.

"Actually my father, James Sutherland, had a general store in Ashcroft and our home was there," she told me. "But my mother was visiting her family at Alert Bay, where my grandfather, Robert Chambers, owned one of the first canneries."

It was the start of a salmon run. An Indian potlatch was in progress and the advent of twins in the small village was looked upon as an omen of good luck.

To ensure a peak salmon run the Indians immediately wanted to induct the twin babies into the tribe.

"And its been a legend in our family ever since that much against my mother's wishes, an uncle did take us as newborns to the potlach and we were accepted as members."

The twins public school days were in Ashcroft with another sister and a brother. Later, they went to high school at St. Anthony's College in Vancouver and then took nurses training at New Westminster's Royal Columbian Hospital.

"Like all the other students, we had very little money, no more perhaps than twenty-five cents a week. So we had to live in the nurses' home, there was no other way.

"We were given a half day a week off, if we worked hard and our supervisor approved. Smoking was not allowed. Curfew was at 10 p.m., and if we were not in and accounted for by that time, it was just too bad."

And it was from there that she joined up for war service and was assigned as nurse aboard a hospital ship that sailed from Halifax, picked up wounded at Gibralter, North Africa and Italy, took them to hospitals in England and then brought convalescents from those hospitals back to Halifax.

She's an ardent booster of

"That ship was not much larger than one of today's ferries," she remembers. "Bunks were arranged in tiers, forty to a ward."

Later, Nurse Sutherland was re-assigned to the troop ship Ile de France, where she remained until the end of the war.

"It was manned by French people, mainly from Le Havre. Nearly all of them could speak some English so I never learned very much French."

Discharge eventually came at Little Mountain in Vancouver and Miss Sutherland headed back to Ashcroft to care for her parents and for the next six years, to take charge of a small hospital there.

"We had fifteen beds in that hospital but somehow we managed to accommodate about 25 patients, many of them Indians."

When her parents passed on, Miss Sutherland came to Victoria to take a post-graduate course in operating room techniques at Royal Jubilee Hospital. A year later she was teaching students, part-time, as they took a turn in the operating room during their training.

In order to became a permanent faculty member she took a year off in the early '60s to attend University of British Columbia, where she won a teaching and supervision diploma at the school of nursing.

After that it was back to the operating room at Jubilee Hospital and full-time teaching there until she retired in 1977.

"That's all behind me now," Elsie Sutherland said as she called a halt to her reminiscing and turned to the new experiences she is enjoying in retirement.

This past year, after taking lessons from a professional, she joined Oak Bay Curling Club. At the same time she became a registered spare with the Victoria Curling Club.

And she has been curling with these clubs as many as five times a week, with what she calls moderate success.

Budget senior fastball and attends all the games on a season's ticket.

Returning for a split-second to the days that are behind her, she had one last confession, which explains, in part, her love of sports and of the outdoors.

"I always wanted to be a physical education instructor," she said, "but when I was growing up there wasn't a chance. It was nursing, teaching or stenography and that was it!"

Magazines Struggle Against U.S. Giants

REGINA (CP) — It's been a long, uphill battle for Evelyn Samuel and Annabel Slaight to get two new children's magazines off the ground because of a prevailing attitude that Canadian magazines generally can't survive.

Samuel is editor and publisher of the Canadian Children's Magazine. Slaight is co-editor of Owl and executive co-editor of Chickadee.

"When we talked to people about starting a children's magazine, they told us we couldn't make a success of one in Canada," Slaight said.

"We couldn't contend with the forces from the U.S. They were too strong."

It was such dominance that both women wanted to fight. They were intent on providing children with genuine Canadian experiences in their magazines.

"I wanted to give kids a sense of their heritage," said Samuel, a former Edmontonian now living in Victoria.

"They can turn on the TV and look in magazines and be entertained by a culture that's not their own. I wanted to show them that it's special and important to be Canadian."

"What we are trying to do and what Evelyn is trying to do," adds Slaight, "is make kids think, not preach to them or tell them (answers). So we give them things to think about."

Owl, a three-year-old magazine designed for children in the nine- to 12-year age group, looks at the environment from several angles. It has recently been joined by Chickadee, a magazine with a similar approach for four- to eight-year-olds.

Owl was built on the foundation of a magazine already in existence — The Young Naturalist Magazine. That's where its first 7,000 subscriptions came from.

A foundation was established to run the magazine.

"It couldn't be a business venture," says Slaight. "We had to acquire money if we were to keep it afloat and a foundation is allowed corporate assistance."

The Canadian Children's Magazine has been financed largely through Samuel's efforts. She mortgaged her house to pay for the first issue and is $75,000 in debt.

None of the magazines carried any advertising initially because both women believe it would be out of place in a children's magazine.

Height Of Folly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Climbing strawberries?

There is no such thing as a natural climbing strawberry, says Howard Brooks, a U.S. Agriculture Department strawberry expert.

The situation came to light recently when the U.S. Postal Service filed complaints against seven companies that had advertised climbing strawberries in Sunday newspaper supplements and other publications.

One advertisement said the plants would produce a "skyrocketing pillar of fruit."

Divorce Law Change in S.A.

JOHANNESBURG (CP) — Irretrievable marriage breakdown now is regarded as legal grounds for a divorce, a recent South African parliamentary bill says. Other grounds listed in the more liberal law are mental illness of one of the partners or continued unconsciousness of one spouse for six months.

Energy From Sky

ADDO, South Africa (CP) — Rosemary Elliott, who uses the sun to heat her bowl-shaped solar stove, says all the equipment can be bought for about $15 Canadian. She says the stove, made of a block lined with silver foil, can ignite paper in 14 seconds and boil a pot of water in 20 minutes. Old newspapers, sawdust and hay, which are placed under the stove and burn slowly, can keep a meal hot for up to eight hours after cooking.

Advertisers Pay for Counter-Ads

What's in Store
Joan Watson

You've been dieting and look a little slimmer. You've been jogging and feel fit. But after that sterling exhibition of will power, you fall victim to television advertising.

A commercial for beer, a chocolate bar or salted crackers sends you on a raid to the kitchen. And after crunching your way through crackers and candy and washing it down with a beverage, you're attacked by remorse. You realize you've consumed salt, sugar, alcohol and a lot of calories. Your fitness instructor would be disgusted. Your diet is a shambles. I ask you, is that fair?

The government of Quebec thinks the hardsell of advertisers should be tempered with counter-commercials that warn consumers of the hazards associated with over-consumption of salt, sugar, alcohol and cigarettes. So, for the past two years, Quebec has levied a tax on radio and television advertisers of 2 per cent of their advertising budgets. This tax, amounting to about $2 million a year, is scooped up and spent on "anti-commercials," spot announcements that counteract the enticements of advertisers with hard facts on nutrition, health, exercise and moderation in the use of drugs, alcohol and cigarettes.

Naturally advertisers were reluctant to hand over 2 per cent of their budgets for the purpose of dissuading consumers from buying their products, but on Mar. 31, Consumer Affairs Minister Lise Payette celebrated the completion of two full years of her program and shows no sign of withdrawing the tax in spite of bitter industry opposition.

There are still commercials for pre-sweetened cereals on Quebec TV, but the next thing you see could be a government spot outlining the menu of a nutritionally satisfying breakfast and it could well include a recommendation for unsweetened cereal.

In addition to the counter commercials, the tax is also spent on a delightful children's consumer program featuring Kebekio, and engaging puppet whose storytelling carries a message for young consumers. Kebekio (modelled on Pinocchio) has become such a hit that his program will be entered in the Cannes Film Festival this year.

Now after all this public service programming has been done, there's still enough money left in the pot for something else. Quebec uses the balance to engage laboratories to test consumer products. The ratings are included in their free magazine, Protegez-Vous (Protect Yourself). This excellent publication would be worth a dollar to any reader but because of the tax on advertising it is handed out free.

A recent edition of Protect Yourself rated laundry detergents and, because the results, questioned the effectiveness of little colored crystals and other "miracle" additives in brand name products, the manufacturers were in a real snit. And to cap it off, the magazine said that shoppers could get the best value by shopping for some of the detergent sold as house brands by supermarkets. The froth and suds from that revelation are still blowing through government corridors, but they're unconcerned. The emphasis, refreshingly, is to get the information out to consumers.

How would you like that to happen in your province? Couple the freedom of information with strong new consumer pretection legislation and you have an enviable beginning in responsiveness to the individual.

Other developments worth emulating are court crackdowns on con artists. Also in Quebec, a man was found guilty of using the mails to promote a pyramid selling operation. Pyramid selling is the unloading of large quantities of merchandise on a hopeful, if gullible, amateur salesman. He in turn is supposed to recruit people to sell the merchandise to the next dupe.

To stop this kind of operation, the courts decided to cut off all mail delivery to four addresses advertised by the con man. He couldn't even get a post office box number. How he gets bills and letters without postal delivery is his problem. That seems like justice to me. Why should he be able to use the mails to defraud you?

Another example of consumers being given a counter clout: in New York State, a store was convicted of giving the consumer short weight on pre-packaged meat. They didn't fine the store. The court ordered the company to sell their meat at wholesale prices for a week.

And you might remember what happened to a mouthwash manufacturer who suggested his product would help fight colds. Included in their $10 million worth of advertising must be a statement saying the product will not help prevent colds or sore throats of lessen their severity.

An oil additive campany, also in the United States, was fined $500,000 for claiming that it would save 20 per cent in oil.

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Saul Levine, psychiatrist; Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

Dear Mr. Vichert: I am an 11-year-old boy with a problem. Two years ago my dad went off with the next-door lady and is now living with her. My mom got a divorce in 1978. Mom met this man whom she loves so much. So does my sister and I think he is a really good father to us. They will be married soon.

My problem is I have to stay with my real dad once a month and stay two weeks sometime in the summer. I don't mind the weekend once a month but I don't want to stay for the two weeks. But my dad said that's the law.

Can he make me go when I don't want to? If I refuse to go, what will happen to me?

ANSWER: It sounds as if your mother received custody of you and your sister at the time your parents were divorced. Your father received visiting rights and the amount of time may have been settled at the time of the divorce. This time is important to your father because, even though he and your mother were divorced, it does not mean he stopped loving you. The visiting rights guaranteed that he would be able to see you. These arrangements are often made to help the parents, and sometimes not enough thought is given to what it will mean to the children involved.

I can understand that you have friends where you are and things you want to do, and you may not want to give them up for two weeks. If you refused to go I don't think anything would happen to you except that your parents would probably try to insist that you go.

Why don't you try to explain to your father what you think? The two of you may be able to make another arrangement that would also be acceptable to your mother.

But I think it is important that you remember that your father cares for you and that your visits are important to him. Try to think through what is most important to you and then talk with your father and mother. If your reasons for not wanting to visit are good ones, I hope that your parents will understand.

* * *

Dear Dr. Powell: I am 12 years old and am 5 feet 6 inches tall. Do you think I will stop growing? I am so tall and sort of skinny. I hate sticking out of a crowd, especially since I am shy and just stand around and listen while my friends talk. I have been feeling lonely and depressed for some time. No boys like me because I am so tall. What should I do? Will I ever stop growing?

ANSWER: I think it is safe to assure you you will stop growing. Most girls will have completed their growth by the time they are 15 or 16 but the last two years' growth is much slower and not nearly as great as occurs in earlier teens.

Your height is one of the characteristics you inherit so if you have tall parents you are more likely to be tall.

But you are experiencing something different. When a girl approaches puberty or the period in her life when she is maturing physically she begins to grow very quickly. She may grow two or three inches in a year. This growth spurt takes place in girls two or three years before it does in boys. So it creates a lot of awkward situations.

Girls and boys who have been about the same height now find they are separated by several inches. The boys remain short while the girls grow up beyond them. In three or four years, this will be reversed and the boys will be taller than the girls.

While it is uncomfortable to have to look down on everyone and so feel different, this situation will not last forever. Try to forget about your height and have fun. The boys probably do not like any girls who are 12 years old. It is not your height as much as their lack of height that makes them just as uncomfortable as you feel. Find some girls you enjoy having fun with and wait for the boys to grow up.

* * *

Dear Dr. Levine: I'm a 14-year-old girl who would like to go out with a 16-year-old guy who feels the same way about me. I'm not interested in getting seriously involved sexually but would really like to have someone of the opposite sex to talk to, to spend time with. We both are serious, share the same activities and have the same tastes. We don't have any trouble in school and my parents know his and they have nothing aginst the boy.

But my parents strongly feel that 14 is not a good age to get involved. They say that if I start going out with guys, I might be in big trouble very young. They say it's okay for me to do sports and talk with boys but school should be my main preoccupation at this time.

I have no intention of disobeying them and losing their confidence, but I sure hope I can make some kind of an arrangement to enable me to go out with that guy.

Should I ask them again or should I wait for a couple of years, as my father would like me to?

ANSWER: This kind of letter doesn't lend itself to easy answers. Actually, 14 is a young age to be getting seriously involved.

However, the problem is that we arbitrarily set standards of behavior according to chronological age, and at times that's unfair. Your letter is mature and thoughtful. It also shows that you have a close relationship with your parents, and that you are responsible.

Is there any way you can meet with this young man in the presence of your parents, or his? Would your parents be prepared to compromise somewhat on their restrctions?

You ask if you should broach the subject again with your parents. Perhaps you could do it as thoughtfully as you have presented this letter. If they are adamant, and refuse to bend, you alternatives are obviously few.

If you are going to go along with your parents, then you should tell him the truth. It might be that he'll wait a while. It's likely that both sets of parents have already been in touch with each other.

I do hope, however, that you'll be able to work out some moderate means of meeting each other.

Dear Dr. Cotter: We are really worried about a friend of ours who has recently been taking drugs and heavily indulging in sex — even with other men. We are worried about his physical and mental health. Please help us.

ANSWER: We cannot help him unless he writes and asks for us to. You may have observed him taking drugs, but how do you know about his sexual adventures? I think that is really his own business unless he asks for help.

The best things you can do for him are to maintain your friendship for him, be available as a friend when needed and pray for him.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Now I know why god lets the woman outlive her husband by about 10 years. She needs at least that much time to rest and recuperate. Pity the poor woman who's been married 50 years. I've been married 17 years, and if this man of mine doesn't go pretty soon, I pray to God that I will soon be laid to rest. I couldn't take another 33 years of this.

It's nag and brag! Rant and rave! Yell and cuss! All he has on his mind is eat, sleep and sex (especially sex). A poor woman goes to bed tired and wakes up tired. All a man is good for is his pay cheque.

I've heard women talk about how lonely they are after their husbands pass on. Well, here is one who is looking forward to that day

NO SIG

DEAR NO SIG: Too bad you didn't sign your name. A husband is entitled to know how his wife feels about him. He may want to hire a food taster.

DEAR ABBY: I am having a problem with my 11-year-old daughter, an only child. Annie thinks she's old enough to stay by herself when my husband and I go out for a few hours in the evening. She says she is the only one in her class who still has a sitter.

My husband thinks Annie is right. She isn't a dumb child. She's in a special class with gifted children, but to me, that doesn't matter. I still think an 11-year-old should not be left at night without an adult. I would appreciate your opinion.

ANNIE'S MOM

DEAR MOM: Age is not always the most important factor. (Some 11-year-olds have more sense than their 17-year-old sitters.) I would not be influenced, however, by what the other kids in her class do. YOU must decide whether your daughter is able to stay by herself.

Camping Tour May Suit Budget-Bound Traveller

Youth on the Move

By LUCY IZON

Do these problems sound familiar?

You're on a very tight budget but you don't want to stay in youth hostels or take overnight trains.

You've got your trip all planned but your companion has to back out and you're leery about setting off on your own.

You've finally saved enough money, but your parents are determined that you're not going to tackle foreign countries without an itinerary and addresses where they can contact you.

Or maybe you just feel that, while travelling independently is an adventure, what you're really looking for is a vacation at a budget price with an experienced guide looking after the details.

If you fall into one of the above categories you may want to consider an organized camping trip as an alternative.

Most camping tours are designed with the budget-conscious young traveller in mind. The prices are reasonable because you can not only avoid the high cost of hotels, you usually pool your food money into a kitty and save on expensive restaurants. That doesn't mean you'll never eat out, but when you do you can afford to do it with some style.

Even if you don't consider yourself the outdoors type, camping facilities in many countries can be more luxurious than you think.

My campsite on the Riviera last summer was equipped with a laundry and swimming pool. In Rome not only was there a good restaurant but even a disco. On the other hand, as you move into countries such as Russia conditions become rougher.

If you can't find a friend who has travelled on one of these trips, you might ask your travel agent to put you in contact with someone he's sent before. It's important when you're travelling with a tour as large as 48 to find a group as compatible as possible.

When you're picking a tour, find out how large it's going to be, then enquire where the others are from. Many companies arrange their tours so that they'll be made up of people from six or more countries.

Also ask about the sex ratio. One company head the nerve to book 19 girls and one fellow on a European excursion last year. To say the women I met were unhappy about the situation is the understatement of all time. But the boy had a ball.

Some companies provide three meals a day, while others offer only breakfast and dinner. Buying your lunch every day for six weeks can take a big bite out of your extra spending money.

Also find out about the size of the crew that will be travelling with you. If you just have a driver and a guide, that means you'll be spending part of your sightseeing time organizing meals.

Although most require you to give a hand with the chores, some companies provide a cook, which lightens the load a lot.

Camping tours have a lot going for them. When you don't know the politics or customs of a strange country, guides from reputable companies will. If you're travelling extensively for the first time they're a great idea.

There are only a few problems with this type of travel. One is that you just don't get the contact with the local people that you would on your own. Most people who travel this way tend to stick with the group all the time.

Don't be afraid to show some independence. You'll have a better chance to get to know the inhabitants.

One other situation that bothers me is that crews from a few companies steer their campers into certain stores for shopping. When I asked them about commissions they admitted they received a percentage on everything purchased by their tour in those shops.

As far as I'm concerned, when you've already paid for someone's services you should be able to trust them to steer you away from rip-offs. It's not a big deal, but if you're going to make a substantial purchase, don't be pushed. Shop around. And if you are in doubt about the situation, don't be afraid to ask.

There are many companies here and abroad arranging these types of trips. Ask around for one with a solid reputation. Here are some of the more popular ones and a few of the trips they'll be running this summer:

GOWAY TRAVEL is the oldest and largest Canadian company operating foreign and domestic camping tours. Among their programs they're offering several Central and South American tours. Their 82-day program starts at $1,280 (U.S.) and visits Brazil, Paraquay, Argentina, Chile, Bolivia, Peru, Equador and Columbia. That price includes land transportation, sight-seeing excursions and services of an experienced crew. It does not include your air transportation or meals, accommodation, visas and some entrance fees, a total of about $10 a day in extra expenses. There are shorter trips available starting at 20 days.

THE SUNDOWNERS six-week European Explorer Tour starts at $630 (U.S.) plus $120 food kitty. The tour starts in London and includes such experiences as a canal cruise in Amsterdam, two nights at a ski chalet in Switzerland, the Spanish riding school in Vienna, a visit to the catacombs in Rome, a bullfight in Spain and a visit to the Louvre in Paris.

EXODUS EXPEDITIONS offers an 11-week India-Overland expedition starting at $1,200 (U.S.) excluding airfare. That price includes three meals a day, camping equipment except sleeping bags and, accommodation in a hotel in Kabul and houseboats in Kashmir. The itinery includes England, Belgium, Germany, Austria, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Turkey, Persia, Afghanistan, Pakstan, India and Nepal. However, with political problems always a possibility, detours can be expected.

PENWORLD is one of the best known operators in the world. This year they're offering over 40 different programs. Their Kenya Safari and beach program is open to anyone 14 years of age or older. The trip starts from London at $1,011 (U.S.) plus $82 (U.S.) food kitty. The fee includes a return air flight London-Nairobi, a 16-day tour by safari coach or truck, camping equipment, game park fees and the services of a guide, driver and cook.

CONTIKI'S European camping tours are restricted to the 18-30 age group. Their 35 day Spain, Portugal and Morrocco tours start at $684 (Cdn.), plus a $123 food kitty.

TRANSITE CAMPING TOURS are also restricted to those 18-30. Their Russia-Scandinavia program includes 5½ weeks of touring Amsterdam, Copenhagen, Helsinki, Leningrad, Moscow, Warsaw, Praque, Berlin and Cologne before returning to London. The tour, out of London, starts at $1,044 (Cdn.) plus $150 food kitty.

TRACKS TRAVEL will offer special short trips for the running of the bulls in Pamplona, Spain and the Munich Ocktoberfest. Both trips depart and return to London. The Spain tour is 11 days, $115 (U.S.) To visit Oktoberfest would be $99 (U.S.)

If you want to try something really different, NAT Eurotours can send you on a 22-day tour to the land of the midnight sun. For $549 Canadian, plus $82 towards food, you visit such well known sights as Tivoli Gardens in Copenhagen and the Oslo ski jump as you make your way up into the Arctic Circle. The tour departs and returns to London.

By L. L. Coleman, MD

I've been married for six years. We have two children and we give all the outward evidence of being a happy family in our small town. But my husband is extremely jealous and constantly pries into every detail of my life. He is sure that I'm having not one, but many extramarital affairs at the same time. I can't cope with it. He gets violent and threatens me. I'm afraid of bodily harm if I tell anybody. There seems to be no way of convincing him that he is wrong. — Mrs. X.

Dear Mrs. X.: Yours is a sad story indeed. As a medical columnist I am sometimes overwhelmed by the number of readers who write to me about their most intimate social and emotional problems. My only explanation for this is that by writing to me, readers are able to maintain their own anonymity and do not have to share their intimate thoughts with someone who knows them personally. Such secretiveness can be a trap.

There are a number of neurotic and paranoid conditions in which sexual jealousy plays an important role.

Many people like yourself earnestly believe that they can handle such a problem without benefit of professional psychological guidance. This is the "trap" I referred to. Others believe that with time there will be an alteration of attitude and the all-consuming jealousy will disappear.

Your biggest job is to get your husband into the hands of a psychiatrist. This demands arduous effort and close co-operation between you, his doctor and your religious advisor. Once he is induced to seek such help, some of the newer drugs will make him amenable to intensive psychotherapy.

Is it possible to survive a brain tumor operation with no after-effects? — Miss N.K.R.

Dear Miss R.: Yes, it is possible. There are some areas of the brain in which non-cancerous tumors arise and do not do damage to important functional areas.

Check of Trash Fingers Crime Boss

By TOM RENNER

NEW YORK (WP) — A four-year investigation of crime boss Joseph Bonanno by Arizona and federal authorities has uncovered a multimillion-dollar criminal empire stretching from Sicily to the United States and Canada, South America and the Middle East.

The investigation, which began when Arizona narcotics strike force agents began collecting and examining Bonanno's trash in December, 1975, involves law-enforcement agencies from eight states, two foreign countries and the federal government. Much of the evidence detailing the influence of Bonanno, 75, comes from his own handwritten notes, recovered from the trash.

Arizona and federal law-enforcement sources said the notes, along with surveillance, legal wiretaps, a search of Bonanno's Tucson home and international investigations, had uncovered a complex criminal empire that is expected to lead to major arrests and indictments in several states and in Canada.

Among the major findings:

—On Feb. 15, 1977, agents recovered a Bonanno note giving a cryptic but accurate scenario for the murder of Frank Bompensiero, a San Diego crime boss. Bompensiero had been shot to death a few days earlier as he was leaving a telephone booth at which he regularly received calls and instructions from Bonanno. Law-enforcement sources say Bompensiero was a secret FBI informer.

—Bonanno has made huge profits from secret interests in an international cheese empire that virtually controls the flow of mozzarella, ricotta and other Italian specialty products.

—While Bonanno had been reported deposed as a crime boss in New York in 1964 for plotting the assassinations of three other eastern crime bosses, he not only remained an important Mafia leader, but may well have become the Mafia "Super Don" and adviser to organized crime in Canada and the United States.

—Bonanno, widely known as Joe Bananas, was directly linked to the Mafia of Castellemare del Golfo, Sicily, where Bonanno was born and his father, Salvatore, was a member of the "Honored Society."

—Notes, documents and observations show Bonanno's influence extends from coast to coast as well as into the Middle East, Europe, Mexico, South America and Canada.

—Documents indicate Bonanno hid records of corporations owned by his sons and himself while those documents were being sought by federal grand juries in San Francisco and Tucson.

The disclosure that Bonanno had been writing notes about planned criminal activities came when U.S. Magistrate Raymond T. Terlizzi in Tucson made public an FBI affidavit authorizing the March 17 search of Bonanno's home. That affidavit, filed by Tucson FBI agent William Christensen, disclosed that Eugene Ehmann, an Arizona narcotics strike force agent, had collected Bonanno's trash twice a week since Dec. 8, 1975, from in front of Bonanno's $80,000-home in Tucson. Ehmann collected the trash under the direcion of strike force director Terry Gimble.

The affidavit said the agents recovered and pieced together torn notes, letters and other documents. The information was shared with the RCMP, the FBI, police in Los Angeles, San Jose and New York City and the Pennsylvania Crime Commission.

The documents, Arizona and federal sources said, provided information that led to investigations in Canada, California, Pennsylvania and New York. Investigations in other states also are under way. Police and federal sources confirmed the notes and letters identified Sicilian Mafia leaders from Castellemare del Golfo, business investments, couriers who carried mob profits to Bonanno and other, possibly criminal, activities.

BONANO
. . . arrests expected

One of the most dramatic notes was the cryptic message recovered Feb. 15, 1977, five days after the murder of Bompensiero, who once had been Bonanno's close friend and confidant.

Law-enforcement sources said the note is a reminder Bonanno wrote to himself to call his son Salvatore. It refers to a .22-cal. weapon of the type used to kill Bompensiero. The note also refers to a San Diego telephone booth and phone number used by Bompensiero on numerous occasions to receive calls from Bonanno, according to sources close to the investigation. That telephone booth, the sources said, is the one Bompensiero was leaving when he was shot.

An Arizona source said Bonanno had been observed several times making calls to the telephone in the San Diego booth from a public telephone booth in Tucson.

Once, agents overheard Bonanno shouting at Bompensiero. Later, Bompensiero was seen by California police arguing with James Fratianno at San Francisco International Airport. Fratianno, whom the FBI turned into a protected witness, has admitted sending killers to gun down Bompensiero at the telephone booth. Fratianno has been identified by law-enforcement sources as a middle-level hoodlum who carries out orders of Cosa Nostra bosses. He has refused to tell law-enforcement authorities who gave him the murder contract.

The recovered Bonanno notes are "gonna rock the mob to its roots," said Vincent Teresa, a former federal informer considered an expert on the workings of organized crime. "No crime boss has ever put down on paper what he's gonna do or the name of people he's dealin' with. He (Bonanno) may have signed his own death warrant."

Teresa, who has been described as one of the federal government's most important witnesses on organized crime, said Bonanno never really was eliminated as a boss, although he had plotted the murders of Carlo Gambino, Thomas Luchese and Stefano Magaddino.

He said — and federal and police sources confirmed — that Bonanno is a member of the Sicilian Mafia, which outranks the Cosa Nostra of the United States. He said that when Bonanno was kidnapped in 1964 for plotting the murders, his fate was decided by Sicilian-born Mafia members.

Bonanno was sent to Arizona and stripped of his Cosa Nostra crime-family leadership in New York. But Teresa said the notes confirm that Bonanno remained a Mafia leader and continued to dictate policy to crime figures throughout the country. Teresa said the notes showed that Bonanno had Carmine Galante installed as boss of what had been Bonanno's crime family. Galante had been Bonanno's underboss and organizer of a criminal empire in Montreal.

The filed federal affidavit says Bonanno's discarded notes had provided the FBI with evidence he and his jailed sons, Salvatore and Joseph Jr., were withholding records and information when they appeared before federal frand juries in Tucson and San Francisco.

The affidavit discloses that Bonnano held financial and tax records of six corporations that the juries were investigating for the laundering of illicit mob money.

The companies were used to defraud creditors and sell stolen property, the affidavit alleges. The affidavit says the corporations controlled by Bonanno and his sons include U.S. Mattress and Furniture Co., Kachina Enterprises and its successor, Los Gatos Construction Co.; Kachina Fashions and its retail outlets, Cathouse Boutiques, and Simons & Lobue Gallery Inc. (an art gallery).

The FBI's Christensen, who worked with the Arizona strike force, said in the affidavit that Bonanno's notes showed he "was making decisions and giving instructions to his son, Salvatore, on how the ownership of the (U.S. Mattress) company should be set up on paper and who would really own and control the company behind the 'fronts.'"

Christensen said Bonanno appeared before a Tucson federal grand jury March 1 and "stated he was not the custodian of records of any of the companies" listed on federal subpoenas. Notes recovered by Arizona agents between Sept. 1, 1978, and March 16, 1979, indicated Bonanno was holding the records.

One document recovered from the trash was a promissory note for $20,000, payable to Kachina Fashions to Bonanno on demand. In another note, Bonanno instructed Karen Bonanno, the wife of his son Joseph Jr., to hide "your scanzalora (weapon) and your gold . . . put in metal box and save at father's house. OK." He then told her to use a public telephone booth at a hospital to receive his calls and instructions.

Another note ordered her to recover Joseph Jr.'s "black travel brief" and put all the gold and valuables from the case into a paper bag and then into a metal box at her parents' home in Los Gatos, Calif.

. . . And Now Bonano's Fate Is Up to Mafia

NEW YORK (WP) — The Sicilian Mafia will meet somewhere in the United States to sit in judgement and decide the fate of organized crime superboss Joseph (Joe Bananas) Bonanno, federal agents and former federal informer Vincent Teresa predict.

Bonanno might have signed his own death warrant by letting handwritten notes and correspondence from Mafia crime figures fall into the hands of the Arizona narcotics strike force, according to Teresa, who was considered to be the third-ranking member of the Raymond Patriarc crime family, taking orders from jailed Patriarc underboss Henry Tameleo. Law enforcement agencies collected thousands of papers from the trash outside Bonanno's Tucson home from 1975 until recently, as part of an investigation that sources say has uncovered a multimillion-dollar criminal empire stretching from Sicily to the United States, Canada, South America and the Middle East.

"They gotta kill him for what he's done,' Teresa said, "but the only ones who can sit in judgment on him is a Council of Dons — Sicilian-born dons — who can sit as equals with the Old Man (Bonanno)."

Teresa predicted there would be a meeting in the United States of the remaining Sicilian-born dons, all of whom are very old, as well as some Sicilian dons who still live in Sicily, who will secretly enter the country for the meeting.

Attending that meeting will be representatives of the American Cosa Nostra, which, Teresa and federal sources contend, is subservient to the Sicilian Mafia. Those from the Cosa Nostra who might attend such a meeting include Santos Trafficante, Florida crime boss, and Carlos Marcello, Louisiana crime boss, the senior members of the Cosa Nostra. But, Teresa said, "The dons, the Sicilians, they are the only ones who can put the 'X' on Bonanno." Federal agents confirmed Teresa's assessment of the situation.

Teresa said he learned from Tameleo, a close friend of Bonanno, that Bonanno is a member of the Sicilian Mafia. He said when Bonanno, in 1963, plotted to murder three New York crime bosses — Carlo Gambino, Thomas Luchese and Stefano Magaddino — his fate had to be decided by the Sicilian dons.

Teresa said that while Magaddino arranged his kidnapping and Patriarca provided him with a secure hiding place in Haiti through the late dictator Francois (Papa Doc) Duvalier, neither Magaddino nor the Cosa Nostra Commission (ruling body) could decide his fate.

"They held a Council of Dons in Buffalo," Teresa said.

The Dons, all Sicilian born, were brought to Buffalo for a conference with Magaddino. Teresa said he drove two of them, Joseph (Don Peppino) Modic and Nazzarene (Don Nene) Turrusa, both of Boston, to Buffalo.

The two dons had met earlier in Boston at what Teresa described as "a roundtable." Also at that "roundtable" were Michael (Mike the Wise-guy) Rocco, Joseph Lombardo, Joseph (Joe Burns) Anselmo, Frank (the Cheese Man) Cuchiara, all members of the Sicilian Mafia, and an unidentified Sicilian don living in Maine. Teresa said the dons already had received an opinion from Philip Bruccola, the former boss of the Patriarca family who had retired to Sicily and was too ill to return to the United States for the meeting.

"When the (Buffalo) meeting ended," Teresa said, "Tameleo came out and said to me, 'I think Joe's going to be all right.' He was. They kept him in Haiti for awhile and then ordered him to go to Arizona. He kept his business interests in New York and the East, but he wasn't allowed to run a family in New York any more. He's alive today because of that meeting on Hanover Street (in Boston) and in Buffalo. What he's done now, though, is bring shame on the Mafia. That's something they don't tolerate. He's gotta pay the price sooner or later."

Bonanno, however, has not been content simply to remain alive, federal sources said, and always has plotted his return to power.

He has "loyal friends" in every family and he still controls the top-ranking members of his old New York family.

When Carmine Galante was freed from prison, Bonanno ordered his associates to make Galante their new boss. Galante, now New York's most powerful crime leader, was the cornerstone of Bonanno's plan to seize ultimate power in the Cosa Nostra.

While Galante whipsawed weaker bosses of New York into submission to his will, Bonanno was believed to have paved Galante's way for a series of meetings with crime bosses or their couriers designed to consolidate Bonanno's influence and Galante's rise to power in the East.

At the same time, Bonanno was observed meeting with crime figures in California who controlled families on the West Coast, in Colorado, Chicago and Canada. With their support, Bonanno emerged as a "superdon" with enormous power, carefully hidden behind the facade of a retired businessman in Tucson.

Bonanno's link with known Sicilian Mafia dons has been confirmed in notes and letters found in the garbage, according to police and federal sources.

One Sicilian don who reportedly communicated by letter with Bonanno was Lino Magaddino, identified by Teresa as a member of the Sicilian Mafia. The letter followed a clandestine route before reaching Bonanno.

The sources said Magaddino lived in Castellmare del Golfo, but his letter was routed by way of Buenos Aires to a contact in Tucson before reaching Bonanno, who apparently had more faith in the sanctity of his garbage than that of his mail. There are many such letters from known and suspected Mafia figures.

One recent message came from the Sicilian Mafia in a postcard. The writer expressed his regrets at not finding Bonanno at home when he visited Tucson this year, but sent "the regards" of Bonanno's fellow members of the "society" to their good friend, "Don Peppino," the Mafia nickname for Bonanno.

Fresh Botha Attack On U.S. 'Spying'

JOHANNESBURG (WP) — South African Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha said Thursday that U.S. military personnel expelled last week for alleged spying had failed to heed a warning two months ago to cease photographing "sensitive military installations" from an embassy-owned plane.

In a sharp new attack in parliament on the U.S. government Botha also listed a series of alleged deviations by American military personnel from their assigned functions that had led the South africans to suspect they were engaged in "espionage."

The Embassy refused to comment on the new allegations.

In the absence of a U.S. version of the substance in Botha's new allegations cast the United States in an even more questionable light for South African public opinion — which has united solidly behind the government's highly-publicized expulsion of the three military attaches last week.

At the same time, however, it appears that the "spy plane" furor, which has brought relations to their lowest point yet, is intended more to discredit the Carter administration than to make an enemy of the United Staes.

"I wouldn't like to lose the goodwill of the United States of America, but surely friends don't spy on each other," Botha said Thursday night in a television interview. "But as long as that spirit is coming from the regime at present in power in the United States . . . our friendship is in jeopardy."

Despite Botha's reopening of the spying incident Thursday, foreign affairs officials said Wednesday the government was not contemplating any further action against U.S. personnel here.

Botha said the camera fitted to U.S. Ambassador William Edmondson's plane had photographed "areas involved in attacks against South Africa."

This could only mean the northern border area of the Pretoria-administered territory of Namibia (Southwest Africa) where South Africa is engaged in a guerrilla war with a Soviet-backed black nationalist group, the Southwest Africa Peoples' Orgaization (SWAPO).

Botha said such photographs could help the "communist geurrillas" in their war effort, and he then implied that, if such assistance was given SWAPO by U.S. military personnel, "it was an act of war against South Africa."

Once again, Botha demanded the U.S. government explain "why it had spied on a friendly country" and added that, until this was done, South Africa could not be blamed "if it looked upon certain people with the gravest suspicion."

Trio Electrocuted

UPPER DARBY, Pa. (AP) — Three house painters were electrocuted Thursday when their aluminum ladder touched a 7,600-volt cable in the Drexel Hill section of Upper Darby Township, police said. Police idenpified the victims as John Kenney, 26, of Ardmore, Pa., Paul DiTrollio, 21, of Havertown, Pa., and Ralph BuonaDonna, 25; of Upper Darby.

Journalists Held

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — Two journalists arrested Thursday night and early today were being investigated under South Africa's Official Secrets Act, a senior police spokesman said.

The spokesman did not elaborate on the arrests of Deon du Plessis, assistant editor of the Argus news group's Africa News Service, and James Beaumont, a trainee journalist with the Johannesburg Star, one of the group's newspapers.

But South African Police Commissioner General Mike Geldenhuys told reporters one or both journalists would appear in court later today.

Earlier, Star editor, Harvey Tyson, said he did not believe the two cases were connected. However, the police spokesman said in a statement the charges being investigated were the same for du Plessis and Beaumont.

They Locked Him Up And Then Forgot About Him

VIENNA (AP) — A man picked up April 1 for questioning about an automobile accident, then placed in a cell and forgotten for 18 days, was found and sent to hospital this week.

Doctors said his survival without food was "nearly a miracle."

The man was rushed from a cell at Hoechst, in the western Vorarlberg province, to an intensive-care unit at Bregeyas. He was identified as Andreas Mihavecs, a resident of Bregenz.

There was no explanation why no one checked the cell since April 1 or why Mihavecs failed to call attention to his presence.

Interior Minister Erwin Lanc has ordered an inquiry.

Black Death Strikes In U.S.

SANTA FE (AP) — A 76-year-old woman has died from bubonic plague, according to New Mexico's chief medical officer.

The woman, who died last Saturday in hospital, is New Mexico's first plague victim in 1979 and the first fatality since 1976, said Dr. Jonathan Mann of the state health and environment department.

The woman, a resident of Thoreau, N.M., was not identified.

Mann said tests conducted by a state laboratory confirmed that bubonic plague, the feared Black Death of the Middle Ages, caused the death. He said it had not been determined whether the woman had plague pneumonia, the only form of the disease that can be transmitted directly to other humans.

Bubonic plague usually is transmitted to humans by fleas on infected animals. Mann noted that most plague cases result in complete recovery if they are treated early.

Classic symptoms, he said, include fever, a feeling of weakness and sickness and a painful swelling in the lymph glands of the neck, underarms or groin.

Mann said officials are trying to find out whether anyone had been in contact with the woman and locate the source of her infection.

Movies Make Profitable Books

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — Just when Hollywood cynics agree there is no new way to turn a buck, along comes Fotonovel, a company which publishes paperbacks of movie scripts fully illustrated with frames taken directly from the picture.

So far Fotonovel has produced The Champ, Grease, Invasion of the Body Snatchers, Hair and Ice Castles with 30 new books due for publication this year.

The man behind Fotonovel is Herb Stewart, a youthful classical guitarist who was unable to make a living playing guitar in this country.

Reared in Hollywood, Stewart, the son of a retired TV producer, studied guitar with Segovia in Spain and toured succesfully in Europe for several years.

On returning to the United States, he discovered classical guitarists weren't in great demand. Stewart and a friend, Laszlo Papas, remembered the "fotonovela" soap opera books they had seen in South America and Europe.

These books were simplistic stories told in photographs for the near-illiterate. They had been around for 40 years.

Partners Stewart and Papas saw the possibilities of using similar techniques with TV shows and movies, taking individual frames directly from films.

"It took us a long time to find anyone that would listen," Stewart said. "After a year and a half Gunsmoke gave us film for a two-page mockup. Two years ago Paramount came through with Star Trek.

Burnett As Soldier's Mom 'Stunning' Success

By LAWRENCE LAURENT
The Washington Post

We're all familiar with Carol Burnett. She's been in television since the 1950s, and her long-running variety show was made into a syndicated program.

That Carol Burnett sings rather well, dances pretty good, makes funny faces an plays a scrub-woman exquisitely.

That's one Carol Burnett, but there are others, and one of them — a new and different Carol Burnett — can be seen Sunday night in Friendly Fire (ABC).

This story first appeared in the New Yorker magazine in a multi-part series by C. D. B. Bryan in 1977. It then became a best-selling book. The screenplay is by Fay Kanin.

In one sense this is the story of a family's losing faith in the veracity of their government, one of the tragedies connected with the Vietnam War.

The son, Michael, has only a month to go when he's killed by "friendly fire."

He is not counted as a casualty of battle. And just what is "friendly fire?" The play is part embittered drama and party mystery, for several stories are told about this friendly fire.

The Mullen family of La-Porte, Iowa, is told first that the Viet Cong might have infiltrated a South Vietnamese unit and called in the wrong co-ordinates by radio. "South Vietnamese artillery accidentally shelled an American position." Two men died, and seven were wounded.

Mrs. Mullen persists and is told, "You never stop. You never let up." She insists that a coverup is taking place in "the murder of my son."

Part of the problem is the lack of marks on his body. He has only one hole, and she asks, "Why couldn't he have been blown to bits, so I could believe he died in a war?"

She refuses to permit the Veterans of Foreign Wars to stage an honor guard at the funeral. Michael, she insists, is to be remembered as a farmer, not as a soldier.

Be prepared to be surprised by this woman's performance. You forget that the tough, persistent, unrelenting farm woman that you are watching is actually being played by a television favorite called Carol Burnett.

Ned Beatty is excellent as the husband: a somewhat simple man, willing to go along with the authorities but pushed by the relentless emotion of his wife.

Her response is to ask which version of the truth is to be accepted — "theirs or ours." She also stings him with the statement, "I thought you understood. When you lose your son, there's only one side."

She takes out an advertisement in the Des Moines Register, asking "How many more lives do you wish to sacrifice because of your silence?"

She confronts Defense Department spokesmen and says, "I just want to know why you're lying to us about the casualties in this war."

Post-war periods are filled with stories such as these. One cannot excuse the tragedies by claiming that "things happen in war."

For instance, we have not yet recovered from the execution of Private Eddie Slovik in the Second World War, and Vietnam, Lord knows, brought out the ugliest stories ever made public about combat. "Friendly Fire," it turns out, is scarcely an ugly story; simply an unfortunate one.

Play Feels Right

NEW YORK (AP) — There is a solid, substantial feel of rightness to Manny, a play about Edward G. Robinson, which opened here this week at the Century Theatre.

Raymond Serra is magnificent in the title role. He is so good that clips from two Robinson movies, Little Caesar and Hole in the Head, are not jarring at all. They just fit in naturally — vocally, visually and stylistically — to Serra doing Robinson.

Serra also wrote this play, which is the firmest, clearest explanation we've seen of a performer pursuing the stardom course, while realizing and regretting the wreckage at home.

There are a few brief scenes with Robinson being accused by the House of Representatives unamerican activities committee of having given money to communist-front organizations. But mostly, the actor is seen with his family. All are shown having faults.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

GARDENING
hilda beastall

The increased planning for home garden vegetable plots has been apparent this past month. It is likely to be followed by more interest in vegetable sections of local flower shows for new gardeners must discover which varieties give best results in their own locality.

Meanwhile, this column hopes to be of general assistance in getting the plants started.

Soil condition is of first importance; that in a general way is being dealt with in Saturday's garden column. Today I am going to my own sowing records and the resulting comments on vegetable varieties as a guide to some of you who find the seed displays bewildering. Remember that every garden plot and every garden has a different micro climate so that guide lists are just guides — not rules.

A second sowing of Laxton's Progress peas will be made this weekend to follow the small sowing made in February; these are now showing indications of flower budding. Broad Beans sown at that same time also look promising.

For a particularly warm soil (perhaps where late frosts are not common) Wanda and Little Marvel pea will do well for both late April and May sowings.

Colder gardens should have the two varieties held for late May and June sowings, keeping to Laxton's Progress until those dates.

A vegetable that likes cool soil and cool air for germination and early growth is New Zealand Spinach. It grows well in warm to hot weather however, without going to flower as do some of the other spinach types, and the plants last all season if young tips of the trailing growths are constantly picked off for use. With luck in weather, New Zealand Spinach continues production in winter.

Longstanding Bloomsdale Spinach makes quick growth from an early May sowing and is fairly resistant to early flowering.

For first sowing of carrots in late April (or earlier April only if soil and air temperature is warm) we find Danvers makes usable roots by July. For further small sowings in May, about May 10 and May 21, we use Nantes Half Long. Both varieties are rather short and stumpy to suit our clay soil though we make a point of mixing in plenty of fibrous compost each year. This holds moisture at the root level to prevent checks in growth.

Lettuce sowing this early must be a leafy variety such as Black Seeded Simpson and Cos, with Curly Endive and Corn-salad for other green saladings. All do well in cool temperatures.

Late May should see a small sowing of Buttercrunch and New York Head Lettuce go in. Keep each sowing to about 36 seeds for a family up to four persons, and repeat in each three week period until late July when a larger sowing can be made to last into fall with cooler weather.

By late May dwarf bean sowings go into average soil, while early warm soils can be sown two weeks earlier. Harvester, Tendergreen, Spring Green and Canadian Wonder are all good green varieties; Puregold is a good golden waxpod.

When sowing peas don't forget the Sugarpod. This is a real labor saver and waste saver — the pod is eaten as a great delicacy

Pods of this edible-pod pea are picked as they reach 1½ inches in length with only an indication of tiny peas forming. Take off the stem, and eat raw in salads or cooked three minutes in a spoonful of boiling water or hot oil. A real flavor treat and full of summer vitamins. Pick three times weekly once flowering begins, to keep the plants producing.

With all vegetable sowings of quick growing seeds such as mentioned here, sow in small quantities and often. Sow the small seeds as thinly as possible and only just cover with fine soil. Rain showers are good for newly sown seeds in warm weather, but in our normally dry spring climate we must dampen gently by hand watering.

Results will be more rewarding than a beginner could believe.

Cargo Destroyed

LIMA (AP) — Fire destroyed hundreds of bales of cotton in the Chilean freighter Argol, officials at the Peruvian Port of Callao reported. The officials said the 25,000-ton freighter was taken to sea and a cargo compartment was flooded to extinguish the flames, which burned for six hours.

French Purists Battle 'Peasant' Cajuns in Louisiana

By CLAUDE ADAMS
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A fight pitting French-language "purists" against those who would preserve the Cajun culture is shaping up in the bayou country of southern Louisiana, and the ripples may yet be felt in Quebec City and Paris.

The protagonists are a French Cajun named James Faulk and a 72-year-old former congressman, James Domengeaux, who has been decorated by the president of France and Premier Rene Levesque of Quebec.

In the middle of the squabble is the Louisiana state board of education, which is currently mulling over a controversial Cajun textbook that has been proposed for use in state schools.

The outcome could provide some lessons for other keep-the-language-pure efforts in the French-speaking world.

Cajun, a corruption of Acadian, is a dialect spoken by thousands of Louisianians whose roots go back to French Canadian exiles of the 1700s. It is a kind of southern Joual, a pre-revolutionary "peasant" French that is dying out because it has no written tradition.

Faulk, a former teacher from Abbeville, La., has compiled a thick dictionary of Cajun words and phrases in their phonetic spellings as part of an ambitious campaign to save the dialect.

Louisiana educators appear ready to okay the book, but Domengeaux (pronounced Domaggio), an attorney and lover of standard French who lives in Lafayette, has vowed to torpedo the idea.

"They're gonna get hit right in the ass on this thing," he said in a telephone interview yesterday. "I got ways and means."

Domengeaux has come clout. He is the chairman of a 50-member state-appointed body called the Council for the Development of French in Louisiana (CODOFIL).

"I'm not gonna be part of the perpetration of a fraud, and that's what we will allow if this book is introduced intc the schools," he says.

"It's an irresponsible act. Do you teach Joual in Quebec schools? Do we teach hillbilly English in America? No.

"Imagine spending state money, and wasting the time and efforts of students on a language that can't be taught ..."

Standard French is taught daily in elementary schools in about half of Louisiana's 64 parishes (counties). Under a 1975 law called the Second Language Act, a school must provide French courses if 25 per cent of parents in the school district petition for it.

A state education official, Homer Dyess, said that on the surface, Faulk's book does not seem to undermine this campaign. The book is intended for use as a teaching aid. Before it is accepted, it must still be approved by a number of advisory groups.

Domengeaux says his adversary is a "well-meaning" man. But Faulk is not quite too gracious about the efforts to block the circulation of his book, which took him more than two years to put together.

"He called us redneck Cajuns, but the way the Cajun people feel about it is this is the way we speak. All the Cajun people are for me. They hate his guts, they tell me."

The Faulk book, among other things, gives the Cajun phonetic equivalents of common phrases. "It is a beautiful day (Il fait beau aujourd' hui)" comes out as "Ee fe bo ojoordwee."

"How old is she? (Quel age a t'elle?)" is written "Kal ahj ahl aw?" "I wonder where she is (Je veux demande ou elle est)" in phonetic Cajun is "J-m dmon ayoo ahl a."

This kind of thing makes Domengeaux hopping mad. "No serious-minded person would support teaching something like this. We teach standard French and it's the only French we speak."

Police Take No Chances In Tokyo Summit

TOKYO (AP) — Police have begun a country-wide security check and are buying $1 million in bullet-proof cars for what they intend to be the best-protected international summit meeting ever held.

The country's entire 200,000-man police force eventually will be involved in security for the meeting of seven heads of state in June and a state visit preceding it by U.S. President Jimmy Carter, said Tomoharu Yoda, chief superintendent of the national police security division. Leaders of Canada, France, Britain, Italy, West Germany, the United States and host Japan, will meet in Tokyo.

"We will use 25,000 police a day in Tokyo during the two-day meeting including 15,000 riot police," he said. With the guard for Carter's expected state visit before the summit, the country's entire police force will be involved.

Traffic jams will be a problem in already overcrowded Tokyo because, Yoda said, streets will be blocked off around the state guest house, where the meetings will be held; the New Otani Hotel, where staff and reporters will be staying; at embassies, if the heads of state choose to stay in them, and along the travel routes of the leaders.

He said police expect "many demonstrations" by leftists and other radical students. Demonstrations will not be allowed at the conference site or along the travel routes, he said, but permits apparently will be issued for other areas.

"The radical leftists were able to gather 6,000 to 10,000 people at Narita (the new international airport north of Tokyo, subject of violent opposition over the Last few years). We expect many more in Tokyo, which is more convenient," Yoda said.

U.S. Jobless 'Not Worst'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment is worse in Canada, Britain, and France than in the United States, the U.S. labor department reports.

The proportion of jobless persons in the United States last month was down to 5.7 per cent of the work force — about six million people. Canada listed a 7.9-per-cent rate in February and Britain and France six per cent each, adjusted figures compiled by the U.S. labor department show.

Japan and Sweden reported unemployment of only 2.1 per cent in January and West Germany, 3.2 per cent in February. Italy reported a 3.7-per-cent rate.

Although the methods of compiling unemployment statistics vary from country to country, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics adjusts foreign figures where necessary to provide a more accurate basis for comparison to U.S. figures.

The bureau's definition of unemployment is "the total number of persons not working but available for and actively seeking work."

In listing the adjusted unemployment figures for other countries, the bureau cautioned that in some cases it is "possible to achieve only approximate comparability" because of incomplete data needed to precisely adjust foreign reports to U.S. terms.

Spring Rains Swell U.S. Floods

United Press International

A torrential downpour sent streets awash in Houston, stranding thousands of residents, and poisonous snakes joined the lowland exodus in Southeast Texas.

Thundershowers combined with rapidly warming temperatures to melt the remnants of the winter snowpack on the Northern Plains, quickly sending flatland rivers to flood stage. Officials considered mass evacuations in the Minot, N.D., area.

More than 17.5 cm. of rain drenched Houston in a three-hour period Thursday night, crippling the city. Flooded streets drowned the engines of emergency vehicles and the fire department urged residents not to call except in life-and-death situations.

At Conroe, 40 miles north of Houston, floodwaters that accumulated during two stormy days pushed down the San Jacinto River, filling Lake Houston to a record level and setting up reaction flooding for the weekend.

Floodwaters kept about 750 Conroe area residents from returning to their homes. About 1,000 residents were evacuated from the west and east forks of the San Jacinto River and Caney and Peach creeks.

The marauding Pearl River, which left 17,000 homeless and caused at last $500 million worth of damage in Jackson, Miss., sent muddy waters creeping into sections of Columbia, forcing more families to join the thousands that have fled its surging waters.

Officials in Minot, N.D., meanwhile, kept a cautious eye on the ice-glutted Souris River and postponed the possible evacuation of 12,000 residents today. Officials said the river may have crested just below the top of the dikes late Thursday. But the National Weather Service said flooding still could occur in the area.

"We feel it's very serious, that it can go over the dikes," said Mayor Chester Reiten. "This is all going to happen Friday afternoon. If we go for evacuation, which I suspect we will, they (residents) have to be out within one day."

Evacuations were reported at numerous small towns along the Red River of the North in North Dakota and Minnesota. The normally tranquil river widened to more than 7 km. along the border of the two states.

Elsewhere, tornadoes were reported in parts of Nebraska, Kansas and Southeast Texas, but there were no reports of injuries or major property damage.

Belly Button Lawsuit

NEW YORK (Reuter) — A 48-year-old woman has filed a $1.5-million malpractice suit againt a plastic surgeon on grounds that he left her with an off-centre navel.

A lawyer for Virginia O'Hare told a state Supreme Court jury that the Poughkeepsie, N.Y., woman's navel wound up about five centimetres off centre following plastic surgery by Dr. Howard Bellin.

Lawyer Theodore Friedman said Bellin had promised to give Mrs. O'Hare "a nice, flat belly" by means of an operation known as abdominal plasty. But following the surgery, Friedman said, "her umbilicus was off-centre . . . the belly button, no longer normal, was a large, deformed hole in her stomach and the scar was of significant thickness."

"The experience caused her emotional shock and anguish . . . and she came apart at the seams," Friedman told the court.

Bellin later told reporters: "The belly button was off ever so slightly, but well within the limits, well within the midline."

Those Pretty Red Clouds Were Bearing Leukemia

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — In 1953 Elmer Picket and other St. George, Utah, residents watched with excitment as red clouds of radioactive fallout drifted across their town from atom bomb tests in Nevada. But his wonder has turned to anger.

Since then, his wife and nine other relatives have died from leukemia and he thinks his government lied to him about the safety of the tests.

"Seeing those large red clouds coming over was quite exciting. But I feel we were totally misled," Picket told a joint congressional hearing investigating the health effects of the Nevada nuclear test program. "I have had a total of 10 people in my family die of leukemia."

A delegation of southern Utah residents testified Thursday during a 5½ hour hearing conducted by Sen. Edward Kennedy (Dem. Mass.) chairman of the Senate health subcommittee, and Rep. Robert Eckhardt (Dem. Texas) chairman of the House subcommittee on oversight investigations. Seven other congressmen and senators participated.

"I feel used. We were conned," said Mrs. Elizabeth Catalan, a young woman who grew up in St. George, 125 miles from the test site.

"They knew (the dangers) and they did not tell us. I will always live with the apprehension that I will die of cancer some day," she said.

Picket said the only warning the Atomic Energy Commission ever gave the residents of St. George that the fallout might be hazardous was a radio broadcast after one blast in 1953 telling them to go indoors. "But not everybody was listening to the radio," he said.

Dr. Joseph Lyon, a University of Utah cancer researcher, outlined a study he recently completed showing that childhood leukemia doubled in southern Utah during the years of atmospheric nuclear testing in Nevada. Since publishing the study, Lyon said he had done additional research which strengthened his original conclusions.

Kennedy said the testimony of the southern Utah people had convinced him that radiation caused cancer.

"There may be some who will demand statistical proof," he said. "But there is no doubt in the minds of fair-minded people, there is certainly none in my own mind, about the causal effect of this radiation."

He said the residents of St. George had a right to be angry because the government did not level with them about the dangers of the test program. He and Eckhardt pledged to support additional health studies and said compensation for cancer victims would be considered.

NY Rats Threaten

NEW YORK (UPI) — A tugboat strike is bringing the threat of rodents and pests to New York City streets.

Seventeen days ago, the men who work aboard barges and tugs in New York harbor walked off the job in a wage dispute.

Since the city takes most of its 10,000 daily tons of garbage to landfills aboard barges, it didn't take long before the streets became overly litter-strewn.

On Thursday, the health officials, citing a potential increase in the number of rodents and insects, declared an official health emergency.

Pen. N-Plant Wasn't Worst On Safety List

WASHINGTON (WP) — Those who regulate the nuclear power industry have an informal safety ranking of the nation's reactors, and many of them rank lower on the list than Three Mile Island II.

TMI 2 had a rather run-of-the-mill reputation during the one year it had operated since its nuclear fuel was first fired up in March 1978, according to several industry sources. "The gossip was that it wasn't operating too badly," said Harold D. Thronburg, director of the NRC's division of reactor construction inspection.

Thornburg heads a project trying to produce a formal evaluating procedure for the NRC to use, but he has asked that his midsummer deadline be extended in the wake of the Three Mile Island near-disaster.

"There's a story we should have seen at Three Mile Island," he said. "We have to do a lot of thinking on how you can see it."

Transcripts of a closed NRC meeting April 5, one week after the accident began at the Pennsylvania plant, show that while the commissioners had been frustrated in getting information out of Metropolitan Edison Co., they had much less confidence in some other reactor sites.

Lebanon War Pulls Mideast To Brink: UN

Times News Services

NEW YORK — United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said today that disorder in southern Lebanon threatens to bring the whole Mideast region closer to the brink of war.

Waldheim said a plan for extending the Beirut government's control over southern Lebanon has been partly implemented but the UN peacekeeping force there still is far from fulfilling this objective.

Referring to opposition from Lebanese Christian militia who control an enclave along the border with Israel, he said in a report to the UN Security Council:

"Despite all efforts, the necessary co-operation has not been forthcoming for further deployment of UNIFIL (the UN Interim Force in Lebanon).

The south Lebanon border zone was reported quiet today after three days of clashes in which Lebanese Christian militia chief Maj. Saad Haddad's troops attacked UN peacekeeping forces with machine-gun and mortar fire.

Meanwhile, Israeli Defence Minister Ezer Weizman today defended Haddad's proclamation Wednesday of Free Lebanon, a so-called independent republic north of the Israeli border, as the work of a true Lebanese patriot who shares Israel's goals:

"There is no question that he is a partner to our goals," Weizman said. "There is a common interest between us."

Waldheim's report said the position of the Israeli government, which supports the Christian militia, "will be crucial for efforts to achieve further progress in the coming months."

Waldheim warned that if UNIFIL is seriously eroded, its achievements would be nullified and the world would face a highly dangerous situation in the area.

"Such a situation would not only be a new disaster for the government and people of Lebanon, but could lead to a renewed and serious deterioration of the situation in the Middle East as a whole," he said.

With both the United States and UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim urging Israel to restrain Haddad, Prime Minister Menachem Begin said in a letter to Waldheim Thursday that while his government exercises influence on the major, it is in no position to "issue orders" to him.

In Cairo today, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat was reported today to have received a 99.9 per cent "Yes" vote in a national referendum on Egypt's peace treaty with Israel.

Radar Nabbing Speedy Bikers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police are putting a spoke in cyclists' fun by using vehicle-designed radar detectors to also catch speeding two-wheeled enthusiasts.

One cyclist caught by a radar trap set up in Stanley Park sped through at 60 kilometres an hour — twice the maximum limit.

"They're a real hazard," said Staff Sergeant Ken McLarty. "Cyclists have got to be made more aware of the problems they can cause.

"They've got very little breaking power when they're belting down a hill at over 60 kilometres an hour. I know they don't have speedometres on their bikes, but when you're on a 10-speed bike and start passing cars, you know you're going fast."

McLarty said two cyclists received tickets, but were charged with disobeying a traffic sign, not speeding.

"We couldn't charge them with speeding because they're not a motor vehicle and the law specifies motor vehicles. So we issued them tickets for disobeying the maximum speed signs."

He said police won't be concentrating on cyclists but hope the examples will serve as a warning.

Sport Fishing Worth $31M

The commercial and sports fishing industries inject $40 million annually into the Greater Victoria economy — with the lion's share of that coming from sports anglers, a nine-month study has found.

The report, prepared for the provincial environment ministry by K. van Westen and Associates of Victoria, determined commercial fishing contributes $16 million, fish processing another $5.5 million and sport fishing adds $18 million to the area economy for a total of $39.5 million annually.

But adding the expenditures for direct goods and services required for sport fishing and major related purchases of recreation equipment and property together, results in a total of $30.7 million spent in Greater Victoria by resident and visitor sport fishermen in 1978.

The ministry commissioned the study last July to analyse the current impact and future potential for fisheries-related activities in the area, and to identify means of projecting the basic environmental requirements of the fishery resource, Environment Minister Rafe Mair said.

The report states that about 19 per cent of the Greater Victoria population, or more than 45,000, participated in saltwater and/or freshwater angling in 1978.

The study says the vast majority of the sports fishermen concentrate on saltwater angling, with only about 4 per cent listed as exclusively fishing freshwater.

"The tidal waters surrounding Greater Victoria consistently receive a total angling effort (recorded in boat days) second only to the Comox-Courtenay area," says the document. It also reports that 21.4 per cent of B.C.'s sport caught salmon are taken in Greater Victoria waters.

More than 10,000 visitors to the area participate each year in sport fishing.

The study also delves into

Air Disaster Crew Cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. federal safety board today blamed an airliner's flight crew for North America's worst air disaster, but declined to accuse it of lack of discipline in the cockpit.

The U.S. National Transportation Safety Board agreed by a 4-to-0 vote that the crew of Pacific Southwest Airlines flight 182 was responsible when the jet collided with a small Cessna 172 over San Diego on Sept. 25. The planes fell into a residential area and 144 persons were killed.

The board said the crew failed to keep track of the Cessna as required by the visual approach rules.

The vote on the primary cause of the accident confirmed a tentative decision reached Thursday. But it was not formally adopted until today because board members were divided on what to list as contributing causes.

The board said Thursday that a cockpit voice recording indicated there was a lax, unprofessional atmosphere in the airliner's cockpit and one of the proposed contributing causes was "lack of cockpit discipline by the crew." That was eliminated today on a 2-to-2 vote.

The board remained divided on a total of 10 proposed contributing causes and adopted only one of them. That one blamed air traffic control procedures "which authorize controllers to use visual approach procedures to separate two aircraft on potentially conflicting tracks."

Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday that Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark would be a wishy-washy prime minister, a head waiter who would take orders from Conservative premiers.

As Trudeau castigated Clark in Newfoundland, Clark was introduced to the Empire Club in Toronto as the man who will be "Joe Now" when Canadians vote May 22.

Clark was dubbed "Joe Who" shortly after becoming party leader in 1976.

"There's no distinction between a Joe Trudeau and a Pierre Clark," New Democrat Leader Ed Broadbent told Vancouver Island audiences, saying there is no difference between the Liberal and Conservative parties.

At a busy pulp mill in Port Alberni, Broadbent saw a roll of newsprint with the slogan "Vote NDP" scrawled on it in red letters.

In Toronto, Clark told 1,300 businessmen Trudeau has improved the lot of French-Canadians but doesn't understand that Canada is "a community of communities."

A Conservative government would bring constitutional changes to give federal leadership in economic and provincial leadership in culture.

A BRIC Share Con? Police Mystified

The Victoria Better Business Bureau and city police fraud squad are mystified by a report of a possible confidence scheme involving the B.C. Resource Investment Corporation shares.

But how the scheme works no one can say, not even Don Alexander, general manager of the B.C. Systems Corporation which processes share applications.

Concern arose when Mrs. Lena Palmer of 307-155 Gorge Road East reported to the BBB that a woman came to her home last Friday and offered to help her apply for her five free BCRIC shares.

The woman, whom Mrs. Palmer described as middle-aged and well-dressed, left an application form and said she'd return in a few days to pick it up. The shares would be then be sent to her in the mail.

Mrs. Palmer said the woman had several completed application forms in her hand but didn't give her name nor did she indicate who she represented in providing her "free service."

The woman phoned on Monday and became belligerent when Mrs. Palmer's daughter told her that her mother had

Wreckage Sifted for Clues

Transport Canada investigators today were sifting through the twisted remains of a Pacific Coastal Airlines plane that crashed and burned Thursday morning near Cassidy Airport killing all six aboard.

A spokesman said parts of wreckage including both engines will be taken to Vancouver later today for detailed examination to determine the cause of the mishap, the first fatal crash at the airport in more than 20 years.

RCMP in Nanaimo said the crash victims were:

Pilot Gary Raindahl, 31, of Vancouver, and passengers Gavin Robertson, 33, Mrs. Nancy Burrell and her two children Joshua, 5, and Jeffrey, 2 — all of Vancouver, and Norman Calvin of Burlington, Ont.

First reports following the 11:34 a.m. crash indicated five persons had died but a sixth body was discovered in the wreckage.

Pacific Coastal manager Don McGillivray said the plane was on a regularly scheduled flight to Port Alberni.

The passengers had arrived from Vancouver earlier in the morning.

He said Raindahl, a former Harrison Airlines pilot who had been with Pacific Coastal six months, gave no indication of problems as he

Purse-Snatching

Victims are Frail, But Can be Prudent

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

He's the most cowardly of thieves.

His victims are little old ladies, too frail to fight back.

The scenario has been repeated about 15 times in Greater Victoria so far this year, mostly in the downtown core and James Bay.

That's not a big number, as crimes go in this area, and neither does it reflect much of an increase over similar periods in past years.

There are exceptions. A couple of years ago two 19-year-olds were convicted on several counts. They both served two to three-year penitentiary terms. The Criminal Code allows a maximum sentence of 14 years.

With juveniles, it's a different story.

Newton says the worst they face is a slap on the wrist and an admonishment from the judge not to do it again.

Purse-snatching, after all, has never been considered one of the heavier juvenile crimes. But don't tell the victims that.

Newton says most of the victims are in their 60s or 70s — a few have been in their 80s — and "the frailer the better."

Attacks usually occur in the early evening, just before dusk, and normally on deserted streets although there is no hard and fast rule. Recently a woman on a twilight stroll near Fort and Broad in the centre of town was pushed to the pavement and lost her purse to a trio of thugs. She had only $4 in her wallet. That, says Newton, is about the average loss.

Most of the attacks come from behind. The method may vary. Last year about a dozen elderly women were robbed of their purses by a twosome on bicycles. After a lengthy investigation police caught the bike bandits. The culprits turned out to be only 12 years old.

"The victims are strictly targets of opportunity," says Newton. "Some of the kids will hit anything. If they can grab a purse and think they can get away with it, they will. It's sort of like going back to Oliver times. We just don't have a Fagan."

The worst areas are James Bay and Fairfield. Incidents in outlying districts are rare. Oak Bay only gets one or two a year, says Insp. Jack Groves. The same applies in Saanich. And Insp. Peter Merriott of Esquimalt can only recall two incidents in the past year-and-a-half.

The statistics aren't surprising. The crime is generally associated with more highly populated areas.

Sgt. John Maybin, head of community services on the Victoria force, says there are several things persons can do to protect themselves.

The most obvious is don't carry a purse, or if you do, put your wallet in your pocket. That's one way to minimize losses.

Another is to carry your purse slightly in front of you, clutched under your arm. That way the would-be snatcher approaching from behind can't see it and will probably leave you alone.

Maybin says anyone attacked shouldn't resist. The possible physical injuries could be far worse than the loss of a few dollars.

He says persons should be cautious about inviting trouble. Don't walk on deserted streets, or if you must, do so with a companion. And while shopping, don't allow your handbag to fall open or leave it lying in shopping cart unattended.

Recently a team of young girls was involved in the theft of several purses from shopping carts.

TOWN TALK

One of the fascinating things about politics is the way carping critics and hostile opponents can be turned into instant converts and true believers.

Take Victoria mayor and Social Credit candidate Mike Young, for example. To hear him speak at the nomination meeting the other night you'd think he'd been a true-blue Socred since he was in diapers.

But little more than two years ago the mayor wasn't quite so complimentary.

In his inaugural address to city council of Jan. 4, 1977, he was downright rude, calling the provincial government "the largest welfare bum in Victoria."

Among other things he attacked the Socred administration for its doubling of ferry rates and raising the sales tax to 7 per cent. Those actions combined with others had "systematically wrecked Victoria as the No. 1 retirement centre in Canada."

Granted, Young's criticism embraced the performance of both the Socred administration and its NDP predecessors, but re-reading his speech it's impossible to tell whether he considered one any improvement on the other.

However, it's now probably safe to assume that he does have a preference.

Those ingenious inventors with their egg-carrying machines will be whooping it uppity-up-up and downy-down-down at the Provincial Museum on Saturday when the second annual Great British Columbia Egg Race gets under way.

Museum director Yorke Edwards isn't sure how many participants will show up but naturally everyone is expecting the race to be a smashing success.

The object of the endeavor is to devise a machine that will carry an egg the furthest distance using only a No. 10 elastic band as power source.

Last year entries from Burnaby gave everyone a shell-aking, sweeping the field in all three classes — 13 years and under, 14 to 19, and the awesome open event.

Run-offs begin at 10 a.m.

Looking for a spot to get close to Mother Nature this weekend, and not too far from home?

This weekend and on Saturday and Sunday, April 28 and 29, the Thetis Park Nature Sanctuary Association, will give guided tours through the sanctuary. Plants are identified for vistiors.

She received a cheque for that amount after placing second in the competition for the kindergarten-Grade 1 group. She attends Sir James Douglas school.

Out of the money but winners in the Victoria area were Stefano Maestralla of View Royal school who was top local grade seven student and Beverly Minten of Doncaster school, who topped grade four students here.

When former alderman Ian Cass was protesting the other night that most Saanich residents would be unable to understand the community plan's references to hectares, Vantreight replied: "It's easy — one hectare, 2½ acres, 21 tons of cabbage."

But presumably it all depends which way you slice it . . .

Consumer Body Spurns Boycott As Unfair to Local Retailers

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Consumer boycotts may be an unfair weapon because they hurt local retailers who often are not to blame for high prices, local Consumer Association of Canada president Barbara Leonard said today.

"We are against organized boycotts because many of the expensive products are imported and not the fault of Victoria merchants."

She was commenting on the emergence of a new Canadian group, Women Against Rising Prices, which is organizing branches in B.C.

WARP has a single weapon — organized boycotts of selected products.

Founded in Ontario, WARP has branches in Vancouver and Nanaimo and has Victoria as its next target.

It will get a mixed reception from the 2,000-member Victoria branch of the Consumers Association of Canada.

"Obviously we can't stop our members from joining this new organization if they want to but there will be no official link between the two groups," Mrs. Leonard said.

"Our methods are quite different. We gather information and make representations to Ottawa on beef quotas, subsidies for powdered milk and other questions. We do not boycott."

Meanwhile, Vibeke Sandberg of Nanaimo is gearing up to promote a massive boycott against selected products in V.I. stores.

"We are just getting organized now," she said. "Soon we will have branches everywhere and we will be into a new boycott program every week."

WARP executives in Brampton meet every Monday night to decide on a list of eight products to be boycotted for one week, running from Wednesday to Wednesday.

The list changes every week.

The main activity of WARP is to get the list published and encourage consumers to follow it.

It has already claimed some successes, especially with lettuce prices.

Mrs. Sandberg said boycott items in the current list include cabbage, grapefruit, frozen vegetables, flour, chicken, canned meat, spices and colored, purfumed toilet paper.

The list always centres on products that have recently risen sharply in price or for other reasons are not economical buys, Mrs. Sandberg said.

The boycott is the best weapon, she says, because nothing else seems to work.

Mrs. Leonard replies that boycotts are an emotional weapon that sometimes work but are often unfair.

A better approach, she said, is to work through the federal government, which has the power to alter market conditions and to establish subsidies.

Besides, she said, the Consumers Association of Canada has to maintain a responsible approach because it receives grants from the federal government through the ministry of consumer and corporate affairs.

The grant was established to enable the CAC to finance its interventions against applications for rate increases by airlines, telephone companies and similar firms.

Mrs. Leonard said that, as an individual, she instinctively boycotted products she felt were too expensive.

"Shoppers do that sort of thing all the time. But that's quite different from an organized boycott which can create an economic hardship for local merchants."

She said the CAC has survived for 39 years by using "a calm, responsible approach" and has watched organizations like WARP come and go over the years.

"Maybe this one will be effective, maybe not. We'll have to wait and see."

She said the CAC would be watching from a discreet distance and will make clear to the public that there is no connection between the two organizations because the CAC does not sponsor boycotts.

Inlet Dragged For Canoeist

Officers aboard the Sidney-based RCMP vessel Harvison were searching the waters between Coles Bay and Satellite Channel this morning for a 49-year-old Saanich electrical contractor believed to have fallen from his canoe and drowned Wednesday.

Central Saanich police chief Bob Miles said Chester Coons of 3971 Cedar Hill Crossroads went to his cabin at 8410 Lawrence Road early Wednesday morning apparently to do repairs on the building.

When his wife arrived later in the day Coons and the canoe were missing although his car with his keys and wallet inside was parked in the driveway.

Miles said Coons' 15-foot red fibreglass canoe was recovered Wednesday morning after it had washed up on the shore at a waterfront home in Ardmore owned by Peter Hyslop.

Police using the RCMP helicopter carried out a waterline search Thursday without success.

A spokesman said intensive searches of the area involving divers, the RCMP helicopter, police tracking dogs, and volunteer search teams have failed to find any sign of John Duprau of 2627 Dunlevy.

Duprau was working with two other men on a house beside the inlet when he began to feel ill and went to a nearby cabin to rest.

When the men went to get him shortly after 5 p.m. he had gone.

Expert Borrowed For Queen's Printer

The provincial government is borrowing a printing expert from the federal government for two years to oversee technological changes in the Queen's Printer.

Howard Britt, printing production manager for the federal government, is coming to Victoria under the Federal Interchange Program which lends executives and specialists to provincial governments.

"Britt's mandate will be to integrate technological and systems changes to the best advantage," Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis said in a press release.

The Queen's Printer does all the printing for government ministries and for most boards and commissions.

Rest Homes Protest Rates

New rates announced by the provincial health ministry for B.C.'s community care facilities will not allow them to deliver the standard of care required, a spokesman for the rest home operators claimed today.

Trevor Shuckburgh, president of the B.C. Association of Private Care Facilities, described the rate increases which came into effect April 1 as "totally inadequate."

He said association representatives will meet Tuesday with Health Minister Bob McClelland to express their concerns.

The increases announced by the ministry in late March range from 50 cents to $1.70 per day (about 3.3 to 6 per cent) for personal care and three levels of intermediate care, Shuckburgh said. But the rate for extended care patients remains unchanged at $34.50 per day.

In a brief submitted last December the association had asked for increases averaging about 15 per cent.

Shuckburgh said the new rates do not recognize the substantial increase in operating costs or the private sector's right to a fair return on its investment.

"If you are running a licensed care facility, whether it's 10 beds in a converted home or 200 beds in a modern building specifically designed to deliver care, you must conform with all the proper regulations and deliver the service that is required."

Local Groups Share In $6M Service Grants

A number of Victoria agencies have received grants from the human resources ministry.

The community grants, among $6.2 million distributed throughout the province, are awarded to local groups providing services for handicapped and to family support programs, youth services and senior services, outreach programs, streetworkers, and child-care counsellors.

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy said financial assistance to such groups supports the role of volunteers.

Last year the ministry provided $5.95 million in similar grants.

Local organizations receiving grants include Garth Homer Centre for the Handicapped which got $89,250 for programs and $8,700 for transportation.

The Greater Victoria Citizen Advocacy Society was awarded $26,600 while $7,200 went to the Physically Handicapped Action Committee.

A $17,500 transportation grant was also given to the Multiple Sclerosis Society of V.I.

Three area organizations received grants for youth services and teen activities — $22,000 to the Peninsula Community Association, $18,400 to Vic West Association and $77,900 to the Victoria YM-YWCA's detached youth work project.

The Greater Victoria Citizens Counseling Centre received $22,900 while $16,300 went to the Saanich Peninsula Guidance Association.

The Victoria Volunteer Bureau received $37,400 and a grant of $7,600 went to a similar organization in Oak Bay.

Family support services grants were awarded to the Downtown-Blanshard Advisory Committee ($17,000), the Esquimalt, Vic West and View Royal Community Advisory Committee ($21,500) and the Victoria Single Parents Resource Centre Society ($7,900).

NEED, the Victoria crisis line, received $37,000.

What Causes Vandalism?

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier today met with police officers, social workers and representatives of youth groups to discuss ways and means of countering a vandalism problem which caused an estimated $200,000 damage in the municipality last year.

Couvelier said the objective of the four-hour seminar was to learn about existing programs for young people, analyse what gaps exist and what additional activities and co-ordination are needed.

The emphasis of the anti-vandalism drive will be on prevention, the mayor stressed.

"I don't think there's anything to be gained in a target-hardening approach; we're not talking about more surveillance or tougher penalties.

"Instead we're talking about trying to get to the root causes," he added. "It's the only approach that makes any sense."

Couvelier said officials estimate Saanich's vandalism for the last six months was around $45,000 ($34,000 in the engineering-public works field and $11,000 in parks).

Projected over a year that's about $90,000 but damage to private property and unreported damage would more than double the figure, he said.

Among those expected to send representatives to today's seminar were the RCMP and Saanich police department, human resources ministry, Family and Children's Court, YM-YWCA, Boys' and Girls' Clubs of Greater Victoria, municipal parks and recreation department and the Greater Victoria and Saanich school districts.

CBC's Dance Fever Fans Wildfire Disco Craze

By JAY BOBBIN

There's a new beat filling the air. Beach radios, parked cars and home hi-fis all are tuning in to disco.

Disco is lasting much longer than its critics predicted. Over the past five years, it has become more and more popular. People are on their feet, dancing with simple movements and some highly suggestive twists. Each week, CBC Television puts a spotlight on this phenomenon with "Dance Fever."

"Dance Fever" is the "American Bandstand" of the late 1970s. It serves as a contest as well as a musical showcase for top groups and solo artists. Scouts are sent to choose the best dancers from discos across the United States and Canada. The talent is flown to California to compete against other pairs for a weekly cash prize. A win qualifies a couple for the periodic semifinals, when they are pitted against winners from other programs for a much larger prize package. Three celebrity judges are on hand during each program to give scores to participting dancers, based on a scale ranging from 0 to 100.

There's always lots of guaranteed excitement on the "Dance Fever" set, as the competing dancers and other members of the studio audience fill the flashy, lighted dance floor to do their own thing. The program is something more than a mere display of boogiers exhibiting fancy moves, though; it has a definite style and sense of character. This is largely due to the two regulars who serve as moderators of the action: host Deney Terrio and disc jockey Freeman King.

Terrio has to be given credit for some of the most unusual entrances any host of a regular series has ever made. Flanked by a lovely dancer on either side, he often makes his first appearance in an outlandish outfit, appearing as Count Dracula or a Rhinestone Cowboy. He keeps pace with the overall setting, often moving right along with the beat as he introduces the next celebrity guest or couple.

Meanwhile, Freeman King sits in his d.j. booth, introducing the records choosen by the contestants. Much-selected favorites include Donna Summer's "Last Dance" and "Le Freak" by Chic. King can be readily identified by the record he sports atop his cap.

Top entertainment figures judge the couples. They include comedians such as Dick Shawn, Phyllis Diller, Ronnie Schell and malprop master Norm Crosby; screen stars including Bo Svenson; stage personalities like Ben Vereen; and television series regulars such as Laureen Tewes of "The Love Boat," Dick Van Patten of "Eight Is Enough," Pam Dawber of "Mork & Minder," Erik Estrada of "CHiPs" and Connie Sellecca of "Flying High."

At the midpoint of each show, a special performer or group is featured. Each is on the charts with a disco hit, and in some cases, the guests are the living personification of the music category. Such was the case when the Village People appeared to sing their smash hit "Y.M.C.A." Other recent visitors to the program have included Peaches and Herb, who offered their Top 10 tune, "Shake Your Groove Thing," and The Sylvers.

"Dance Fever" has expert guidance in the production department, since the man in charge of the project is talk-show host Merv Griffin. The series was really launched by several of Griffin's own shows which he devotd to the disco scene and American disco dancing championships. Deney Terrio was a featured guest on some of those programs, making him a natural and logical choie for the hosting capacity on the series.

"Dance Fever" fans the wildfire disco craze. Those who want to learn new steps or watch some of the very best dancers show their stuff may have made CBC's "Dance Fever" a regular viewing habit already.

BALLOON SPECIAL

The beauty and serenity of silent flight and the sheer joy and intensity of hot air ballooning are captured in a special public television documentary, The Great Midwest Hot Air Balloon Rally. The half-hour program, which highlights one of the largest and best organized hot air balloon rallies in the country, airs Sunday, April 22, at 4 p.m.

Produced on location amid the spectacular scenery of the Wisconsin Dells, the special was filmed on the ground and aloft from a helicopter and balloon gondola. Film footage was also shot from inside an enormous balloon envelope as it was inflated and alongside a chase vehicle traveling over rough terrain in hot pursuit of an airborne pilot. The result, a visual portrait of an annual Wisconsin event, is climaxed by the simultaneous ascension of more than fifty huge, colorful hot air balloons.

CLUES DOWN:

4. COD not rod. Any really interested fisherman is interested in fish (COD), while not necessarily setting too much store by excellence of expensive tackle (rod).
5. PREMISES not promises. The clue tends to attribute error, as to the person who misguidedly builds his hopes on false PREMISES. To be deceived by false promises is not exactly what is implied by being "misguided."
10. JOB not mob. A policeman is accustomed to the existence of criminal mobs as a fact of life; more immediately, the sort of thing that stands to "stir him to great anger" is a particularly outrageous occurrence (JOB).
11. OILY not wily. One readily thinks of an OILY type as being suavely shifty in the manner suggested by the clue. You may well associate a wily type with active deception or clever maneuvering, rather than merely unreliability, or smoothness of talk.
16. PARTS not Paris or parks. "Paris" seems oddly specific; similarly, parks hardly offer particular facilities for panoramic views (available in any open location). "PARTS" has a special aptness, in linking up with the idea of combining several photographs to embrace an extra wide or "sweeping" scene.

CLUES ACROSS:

1. PAUSE not cause. To work so hard without PAUSE "might well be thought a bit odd." To do so without cause — if possible at all — would be very unusual indeed.
6. POTTER not porter. In relation to a serious "career" — albeit one of minority appeal — POTTER is more apt; there are careers in ceramics. Being a porter is a worthy job, but you can hardly expect any youngster at all (much less "very often") to be attracted to it in terms of a "career."
7. STARRED not starved. The tone of the clue suggests something worth doing, or claiming that one has done, in which way STARRED is more apt than starved.
8. GRIME not crime. GRIME builds up "if allowed." Crime is never simply allowed to increase; it increases, rather, despite vigorous attempts to prevent it.
12. OUR not fur. The "general" nature of the clue suits "OUR" better. Also, one tends to associate fur garments with luxury rather than practical durability.
13. MESS not mass. MESS is the more contributive answer. "Mass" tends merely to duplicate the sense of the clue's phrase: "in bulk."
14. BILK not balk. To BILK, or cheat, is certainly asking for trouble; but you may quite properly balk a man as a defensive move in some game, for instance.
17. EAST not past. The idea of an aspect being "exotic" (i.e., from abroad) links up better with EAST.
21. TORRENT not torment. TORRENT is more firmly apt. The raging torment of toothache, for instance, has a well-known quick cure.
22. DUAL not dull. The clue's underlying suggestion that a film might be centered on "a character with a DUAL/dull personality" is more reasonable in the case of DUAL.
24. STORY not storm. In specifying "garrulous," the clue seems rather to have "STORY" in mind.
25. NEWS not nets. As suggested, tennis NEWS is of interest — albeit "limited" to persons who are interested in tennis. On the other hand, why view tennis nets as objects of interest?

Soap Opera Scene

Daren's Thriving on Work

By JOHN GOUDAS

Daren Kelly, appearing as Dan Kennicott in All My Children by day and as the menacing Clifford Anderson in Deathtrap on Broadway six nights a week (plus matinees) has a workload that would throw most actors, but Daren is thriving on it. He says his juices are kept at a boiling point and he expends all his energy so that he ends up happily exhausted.

This pace won't continue for too much longer, since Daren will be leaving the soap next month. He feels it's time to move on. However, he will continue with the play for as long as it runs.

"When I started playing Dan," said Daren, "he was a farm boy type with very little polish, but I think he has become a little more sophisticated in the three years or so since I began in the part," Daren said.

Unlike some other soap stars who have been on the daytime dramas for some time, Daren has only positive things to say about his experience. He thinks it is a terrific way to earn a living as an actor while pursuing stage roles. Daren also said he learned a lot about his craft.

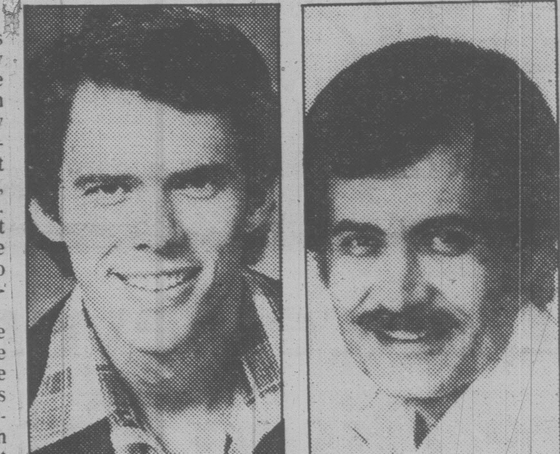
Although Daren was born and bred in Burbank, Calif., just a few miles from the Hollywood studios which turn out the movies, he traveled to New York to establish himself as an actor. He went the usual route of classes, showcase productions, and stock. He didn't even know how to go about trying for a job on a soap.

"I was really naive when I first started in New York," said Daren. "I didn't realize there was a file with thousands of actors' names just waiting for extra work."

In any case he got the extra work and it eventually led to All My Children — and Broadway.

CHANNEL CHATTER. Actor John Aniston, who is Martin Tourneur on Search for Tomorrow, and Ann McCarthy, who plays Bambi Brewster on Love of Life, will travel to Spartanburg, S.C., where they'll make a public appearance at a local shopping centre on May 4 and 5. Incidentally, John Aniston went to school with John Varholy, the general manager of WSPA-TV, the CBS affiliate in Spartanburg, so it will be a reunion for the two Johns.

Search for Tomorrow fans in the Sarasota, Fla., area also will have a chance to see some of their favorites in action this June when Sherry Mathis (Liza Kaslo), Rod Arrants (Travis Sentell), Jerry Lanning (Nick D'Antoni), Lewis Arlt (David Sutton), and Megan Bagot (Laine Adamson), show up to shoot on-location scenes.



DAREN KELLY (left) plays Dan Kennicott in All My Children in the daytime, and acts in Deathtrap at night and matinee days on Broadway. John Aniston, who is Martin Torneur in 'Search for Tommorrow,' will be on a promotion stopover in Spartanburg, S.C., on May 4 and 5.

ABC's 20,000 Pyramid, will have a special daytime celebrity challenge in mid-May. Ryan's Hope-ers Helen Gallagher (Maeve Ryan) and Michael Levin (Jack Fenelli) are the first celebrity guests signed for what promises to be a lively contest. Speaking of Ryan's Hope, its cast and crew will celebrate the serial's 1,000th show on May 11. Ryan's Hope premiered on July 7, 1975, and has won six Emmy Awards.

Love of Life will have a new writer beginning in early May — she is Ann Marcus, the wonder lady who whipped Days of Our Lives into the top-rated show it now is. Ann wrote for Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman during the height of its popularity and more recently wrote the CBS made-for-television film, Women at West Point.

Genie Ann Francis (Laura Webber on General Hospital), will be accepting her award for Best New Actress on the syndicated Mike Douglas Show, airing early in May. Also on the show One Life to Live will be named Best daytime Serial and Jacqueline Courtney (Pat Kendall on the soaper) will be on hand to accept the award for the drama.

PLOT PORTENTS. Lisa Coleman has told everyone that she is in Switzerland on As the World Turns, when indeed she is holed up at home. If she is doing this to worry her estranged husband, Grant, she seems to be succeeding. As we know from Lisa's previous romantic history she'll stop at nothing to keep her man!

Kelly's drug habit is out in the open on All My Children. Now, maybe, she can completely rid herself of Eddie. Dr. Tyler had to threaten Phoebe in order to get Mona her job back, while Erica continues to rant about the whole situation. Caroline writes a goodbye note to Frank which reveals some devastating news and Wally's parents make a last-ditch effort to stop the wedding.

Tony makes a devastating blunder of mistaken identity on One Life to Live. Dick's treachery seems to have worked on the ailing Adam, who has been getting it from all sides. And poor Karen makes no progress getting closer to Larry, even though love still exists between them.

Jill confronts her drug problem on Ryan's Hope, but in her pain, she cries out for the wrong help. Jack gets quite a surprise when he calls Mary in Washington and Frank and Rae reach a decision concerning their relationship.

The Meecham case takes several interesting twists on The Edge of Night. Another tape shows up that's harmful to Winter's case. Meanwhile, Draper's suspicions are heightened as April gets closer to Margo, and no one seems to know the extent of Elliot's greed and deceit.

Company Offers Program Preview

TORONTO (CP) — Prevue International says it has offered Toronto cable companies a half-hour newscast previewing the night's television series, specials and movies.

Roy Shields, former managing editor of TV Guide Canada and an official of Prevue, said the newscast would include film highlights of programs on all channels, full listings of the night's programming, discussions of industry concerns and interviews from Hollywood with persons involved in the night's specials.

Other officials of Prevue International are Harry Boyle, former chairman of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, Rowland Barber, former Hollywood editor of TV Guide, and Noel Moore, a specialist on satellite and cable broadcasting.

"We hope to prove it can work first in Toronto, the most heavily cabled area of Canada," Shields said. "Then it could be duplicated elsewhere."

GLUG — My favorite actor is Mr. Lloyd Bridges. Does he have a son in show business? Also, where can I get his autobiography. — Cher, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Gee, with your name I would have thought Sonny's ex would be your favorite. Anyway, you haven't been keeping up very well with the former "Sea Hunt" star. He has two sons in the business, Beau Bridges and Jeff Bridges. Father and both sons are set to star with the Carradine clan (John, David, Keith and Robert) in an upcoming film based on the Hatfield and McCoy feud. So far, Bridges hasn't written an autobiography.

Nothing happened to her, other than she left the series. Learned decided she'd had enough of Walton motherhood and has gone on to other projects, so Olivia has supposedly gone off to a sanitorium for failing health.

HULK FEUD — Is it true that Bill Bixby and Lou Ferrigno are fighting all the time? What's the trouble about? — Mike Mandrell, Biloxi, Miss.

Ego is the trouble. Each of theirs is too big to deal with the others, so clashes have been common on the set of "The Incredible Hulk." Ferrigno has been painted as the more troublesome of the two by other cast and crew members, if you're into placing blame.

RECORD DEAL — How much is a Beatle's record worth if it's the first album they ever made on Capitol? — Swetland, Olean, N.Y.

Basically the list price. Dealers do not put that high a premium on early Beatle's lps unless there's something uncommon about them. For instance, the first issues of "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow" that had The Beatles wearing blood-splattered butcher's coats and holding mutilated dolls is worth about $50. The second issue of the lp, with the four of them sitting on a trunk is only worth a bit more than current retail. Certain hard-to-come-by singles are worth more.

YOUNG-ER — Could the "Charlie Hume" on "Lou Grant" have been "Pepper Young" of the old radio show, "Pepper Young's Family"? — Chris Southworth, Sidney, B.C.

He could have been, and indeed was Pepper Young for nearly two decades on radio.

POOR DRACULA — After Michael Nouri (ex-Steve Kaslo) was killed off on "Search for Tomorrow," I was very upset. I didn't hear any more about him until "Cliffhangers" came along. Needless to say, I was very unhappy to see Michael playing Dracula. I feel he is entirely too goodlooking and talented to play such a part. Is there any chance he'll be doing any TV movies or singing roles? I'd love to know more about him. — M.L.D., Lebannon, Pa.

Nouri is in very talented and good-looking current company as Dracula — consider Frank Langella who played him on Broadway and in the upcoming film version, which every actor in town was after, or George Hamilton, who's in the spoof "Love at First Bite." Dracula is considered a very sexy fellow, if a bit unorthodox in his lovemaking. As of this moment, Nouri is not slated for a TV movie, but NBC has big plans for him. Your hero was born in Washington, D.C. He later attended school in Connecticutt and went to Rollins and Emerson Colleges. He appeared briefly in "Goodbye, Columbus," his first film. Back in New York, Nouri appeared opposite Julie Harris in "Forty Carats." And on TV he starred in "Beacon Hill" as Giorgio Bellonci and as Tom Conway in "Somerset" before moving on to "Search for Tomorrow." He is 6-foot-4 and 185 pounds, perfect vampire proportions if you ask me.

Questions of general interest should be sent to: DIALOGUE, Pepper O'Brien, NEA, 220 Park Avenue, New York, N.Y., U.S.A. 10017.

BARNARD HUGHES stars as Father Brown, a crime solving clergyman who befriends a young woman innocently embroiled in a series of bizarre incidents in Sanctuary of Fear, on channels 8 and 5, Monday, April 23, at 9 p.m.

The New Pinocchio

The newest version of Pinocchio since Disney will be presented on Channel 9 in four half-hour episodes on the Once Upon a Classic series beginning Saturday, April 21, at 6 p.m. The Pinocchio, produced at the BBC, employs actors and puppets, and is rich in special effects and technical wizardry, laced with original music and songs. And in two diversions from the Disney film, this Pinocchio is critiqued by a cynical cricket and swallowed by a shark.

Based on the heartwarming tale by Carlo Collodi (Lorenzini), an old master woodcarver, Geppetto, carves a puppet out of a magical piece of wood, names it Pinocchio and hopes that the doll will bring him the happiness he lost when his son died in childhood. A cynical cricket living in the hearth of the house thinks this most unlikely; he is forever drawing attentin to Pinocchio's faults. Local children jeer at Pinocchio because he is made of wood.

Pinocchio is delighted to learn from the Blue Fairy, his guardian and conscience, that he could become a real boy — if he proves himself good, kind and obedient.

No Overnight Success

By DAN LEWIS

Success did not come overnight to Erik Estrada. But now that it has arrived, he is both enjoying it and converting it into worthwhile endeavors.

Estrada is the young man with the wide smile and flashy white teeth whose popularity has been largely responsible for converting "CHiPs" into one of the few hit series to come out of the NBC stable in recent seasons.

As the irrepressible Frank "Ponch" Poncherello, Estrada has emerged as a hero to the kids. He brings in more letters per week than any NBC personality has seen in years, arriving in the network's mailroom at the rate of nearly 10,000 per week.

Estrada's TV personality is not unlike his personal image. In public appearances, he is playful and exuberant. At a television-program executives convention (NATPE) in Las Vegas recently, he joked with hotel security guards on one of their walkie-talkies, and he waltzed on stage during the annual dinner (to present an award) carrying a waiter's tray with dishes on it.

After two seasons in "CHiPs," Estrada decided to take time off, relax and have some fun.

He came to New York to celebrate his 30th birthday in his home town, and when NBC arranged a reception for him at the posh 21 Club, Estrada, nattily dressed in a white suit, looked around and observed, "When I was a kid, I used to deliver to places like this."

If he suffered any trauma at reaching the distressing age of 30, it was camouflaged well.

Through it all, he has not forgotten his roots, nor his desire to help the unfortunate and the underprivileged.

He remains active as a member of the New York Commission on Bilingual Education.

Other than enjoying the vacation time and campaigning for social issues, Estrada has considered various offers, doing his own production and making some state fair appearances later in the summer.

"CHiPs" started slowly in its first season, with typical new-born problems. A new producer and a time-slot change (from Monday to Saturday night) later, and "CHiPs" was embraced by an adoring younger audience.

"I think what began to make it work," Estrada explains, "is the kids felt they were watching a show that was believable. We try not stray from realities.

"I know, the people from the California Highway patrol keep telling us how much they appreciate the fact that for the first time a series portrays them as real people — not inflated super types — but vulnerable as well as committed."

Estrada started his acting career in New York as part of Mayor John Lindsay's Cultural Program, an acting troupe that performed in public parks. His professional training included the American Musical Dramatic Academy. He went to Hollywood, where he managed to keep busy in films, and a flock of guest roles in mostly action series, such as "Hawaii Five-O," "The Six-Million-Dollar Man," "Joe Forrester," "Police Woman" and "Kojak." In the majority of those appearances, he was on the wrong side of the law, usually the young hood.

Top Intrigue Maker

Murder, affairs, impotence, homosexuality — the weekly trials on ABC's situation comedy "Soap" make daytime dramas look like grinding bores by comparison. The Thursday night ABC series packs more family intrigue per 30 minutes than any other situation comedy.

Cathryn Damon stars as Mary Campbell, the poor relation to her wealthy sister, Jessica Tate. Looking relaxed and lovely, Cathryn stopped in her home town, New York City, during her spring hiatus.

She chatted about her series, her stage work and the differences between the two.

First off, Cathryn insists, "We're not vulgar on the show. Many situation comedies are very suggestive, we treat subjects very straightforward with a sense of humor. In this country we're not grown up enough to deal with what goes on in our own families."

When Soap was first publicized two summers ago, its honesty policy nearly backfired. Many stations didn't take the show on after several religious publications condemned it (without screening it) for dealing with controversial issues.

After many starring roles on Broadway, Cathryn landed the "Soap" role. She reveals that she'd never had a "TVQ" before. Although she'd been up for five previous series, she hadn't been signed because networks were uncertain of her television appeal.

Cathryn smiles and hints that "Soap" picked her up because they couldn't find an established television actress who fit the role. Two years ago she packed her bags and moved from Manhattan to Los Angeles — although she keeps her apartment in New York.

She finds the relaxed atmosphere in California disconcerting at times. "I'd never been involved in television, I'd gone to work every night at 8 (in the theatre)," she says. "Everyone is late in California, possibly because you have to drive everywhere. I get to the studio on time and wait 30 minutes for everyone to show up."

But the most difficult adjustment for this established stage actress is working with cameras. "It's hard to watch myself. You can be working yourself to death on a facial expression only to find that the cameras are on someone else. It's a very weird feelings."

John Hearn's Collectibles

Collecting is becoming big business. It has been that way in the United States for many years and in Canada, at last, all signs are pointing straight up.

For example, a letter from Ron Anger of the Photographic Historical Society of Canada who said that when I mentioned their 1978 Annual Show he received numerous enquiries from all over the country. "The show was a fantastic success," he says, "with larger public attendance than a similar show in New York City — only outdone by the California show. Camera collecting is going crazy. A show in Japan recently lasted a whole week with fifty thousand people attending. This year we are planning for double."

The society, formed in 1974 brings together people interested in collecting, preserving and learning about historical protographic equipment, images and literature. The show, which will be held at the Chelsea Inn in Toronto on May 5th and 6th will include displays of old and not so old cameras and photographs, an auction and a swap meet.

For more information about the society contact Ron Anger at 194 Craighurst, Toronto, M4R 1K2.

I was writing about old 78 records a few weeks ago and unleashed the usual flood of enquiries about the possible value of works by such luminaries as Harry James, Johnny Ray and Percy Faith — what are they worth and who wants to buy them.

Both are impossible questions. I heard last year that someone was going to publish a price guide which, I take it will not be more or less suspect than any other piece guide; as far as I know it has not yet appeared. But even if you do own a rare and 'valuable' record, finding your collector is likely to be something else again.

The problem is well illustrated in a letter from William Love of Pittsbugh, Pa. who says "I have a collection of about 9,000 78 rpm records, 1,000 12" and 16" records that I would like to sell. The auction value of this collection is $50,000 or more. The material is primarily traditional jazz dating back to 1910.

"I hope to have this collection come into possession of a library, museum or institution that will make it available to the public in some way. The most promising arrangement might be to locate a person of sufficient means to purchase the collection and donate it to an institution. I could have the collection appraised and sell it for 50 per cent or more tax bracket. He could then deduct it on his income tax return and the transaction would cost him nothing. He might even make a profit. I would get an acceptable amount for the collection and the entire transaction would be legal."

Love's letter is addressed, Dear Editor, Collector, Dealer, etc., and has presumably gone to everyone with any kind of connection in the trade in the whole of North America.

That is the kind of trouble you have to go to in order to sell a collection.

The tax dodge, is, I believe, just as legal here as in the U.S. except that the government is far more likely to give the nod to a donation of some outstanding work of art, rare first editions or unique manuscripts than to 10,000 phonograph records.

Readers letters should be addressed to Collector's Items, c/o Victoria Press, R.R. 1, Lowbanks, Ont. N0A 1K0.

Margaret's Important Because She's a Threat

Maybe by now you're already beyond reading about Beyond Reason. Maybe, in fact, you've had your mind made up about Margaret Trudeau since 1976, the year of the "Song for Senora Perez" Affair.

That would be a pity, for Margaret Trudeau is important. You have only to observe the pundits insisting how totally unimportant she is to realize the real truth. Canadians have a long history of shoving disturbing things under the rug. Margaret's biggest sin, in many eyes, is that she refuses to stay where she's shoved. She's a rebel, an innovator, a woman who refuses to settle for less. In short, she's not the scatter-brained fool we've had presented to us; she's a Threat.

Admittedly, it's difficult for Canadians to appreciate her motives. Our ancestors who settled this country did so for material reasons, on the whole. They gave up quality of life back home in the hope of finding quantity of life, preferably in cash, over here. Even today, many of our artistic and cultural amenities exist precariously on the surface, fated to be first in line when cutbacks are made. The old work ethic mentality has its virtues, but its philistinism isn't one of them.

(It's also worth pointing out that even our much-vaunted progress toward cultural sophistication is strictly relative. It's not so very long ago, after all, that I attended a working lunch and was offered a pre-meal glass of sherry by the waitress: "Would you like dry, or Canadian?" she said.)

The derogatory adjective most commonly applied to Margaret is "spoiled". She's the girl who had everything, who was spoiled by it, and who threw it away. Now she's behaving badly in public, like every other spoiled child before her. "Serves you right," we used to say to them in the playground.

So runs the materialistic point of view that is a part of us all. A Cinderella who turns her back on her Prince when the slipper no longer fits has no business being on the program.

'A woman who refuses to settle for less'

But this Cinderella is different. Her grandfather, James Sinclair of Banffshire, Scotland, emigrated to Canada nearly 70 years ago because of the fish. He was a schoolteacher, a married man with four children, who had a passion for fishing that could be exercised only by poaching on a nearby private estate. The second time the warden caught him he knew his teaching licence was in jeopardy. Would he give up fishing? Not on your life. He emigrated to Vancouver, where the salmon river runs. Quality of life came first for James Sinclair.

So, too, for his granddaughter Margaret. In a revealing paragraph near the end of Beyond Reason she sums up her situation as Pierre Trudeau's wife: "From the day I became Mrs. Pierre Elliott Trudeau, a glass panel was gently lowered into place around me, like a patient in a mental hospital who is no longer considered able to make decisions, and who cannot be exposed to a harsh light. The result was that for five years I lived in cotton wool, struggling to grow up, to shape my own life, uncertain about whom exactly I was fighting against, but increasingly convinced that this artificial life was slowly crushing me to death. With so much civility around, whom to attack? With so much comfort, how dare I complain?"

Beyond Reason has much to say, of course, about the marriage and Ottawa life. But equal time is also given to Margaret's official career as the prime minister's wife. Revealing glimpses of people like Kosygin, Chou En-Lai, Prince Charles, Pat Nixon, Castro and the Queen make Beyond Reason both important and compulsively readable.

Margaret wrote it with the help of Caroline Moorehead, who did a good job of organizing large quantities of specific detail. The insights, however, are Margaret's own.

It's worth considering that Beyond Reason might never have been written if it had not been for the FLQ crisis in the fall of 1970. The Trudeaus were married in March, 1971; they came home from their three-day honeymoon to an Ottawa in a state of seige. More than any other single factor it was constant police surveillance which broke Margaret's spirit. When she was finally told that round-the-clock security was "not actually compulsory", "it was the beginning of the end. Having tasted freedom, the sweet beguiling smell of escape, how could I resist it?"

Yes, Margaret Trudeau is indeed a threat. Because most of us, in this century that was supposed to belong to Canada, long ago agreed to settle for much, much less.

BEYOND REASON,* by Margaret Trudeau. Random House. $12.95.

She Probes Indian-White Cultural Clash

By ALEK de MARCH

There are writers in Canada who have become fashionable fixtures on the literary scene. Their names and pictures pop up in newspapers and magazines with the regularity of a sunrise, but all too often without the glow. B.A. Cameron isn't one of them.

Ms. Cameron lives in Nanaimo and that, of course, is on an island and behind the Granite Curtain. This could partly account for her being so little known to the general public. And yet Ms. Cameron must be regarded as one of the most successfully creative writers to emerge in Western Canada during the past few years.

She is also one of the most versatile and prolific authors, having pubished poetry, short stories, and written for radio and television as well as for the stage. Two of her plays, Drying Up the Streets and Homecoming, were telecast by the CBC in March.

Ms. Cameron's best known work is her award-winning CBC film Dreamspeaker. It received an Etrog for the Best Screenplay, also winning in five other categories, including the Best TV Drama. Claude Jutra directed the movie, which has also been shown by the BBC in Britain and on the PBS in the United States.

With her recently published book, Dreamspeaker and Tem Eyos Ki and The Land Claims Question, Ms. Cameron has joined the ranks of novelists. The book is made up of a novella, Dreamspeaker, first written as the successful screenplay; and a long short story, superbly written in the form of a monologue, about Ki Ki, a 22-year-old Nootka woman destined to become her village's Old Woman.

The book and most of her other work have been published under the name of Cam Hubert, but since her divorce last year, the author has assumed her own name, B. A. Cameron.

Dreamspeaker is the story of a disturbed, 11-year-old boy named Peter, a product of parents whose main interest was the pursuit of dope and booze. He has been in government custody from the age of four.

The story opens when, after going through a number of foster homes, Peter is committed to an institution for delinquent boys as punishment for arson. The boy appears uncommunicative and tough to men and women in charge of his destiny, as well as his fellow inmates, but the readers are told in vivid passages about Peter's constant horror of an unknown evil that pursues and threatens him. Before the well-meaning doctors can get a crack at Peter's sick mind, he escapes the institution.

The action shifts away from the white man's world when, during the escape, the boy encounters an old Indian, the Dreamspeaker, and his mute companion, He Who Would Sing. The old man and the mute live in isolation in a cabin and Peter moves in with them.

Ms. Cameron's penetrating insights into the cultural contrasts between the white man's and native Indian's world serves her well when she tells how the old Indian and his companion react to Peter's problam. The passages describing Indian spirits at work to bring relief to the boy's sick mind are moving and provoking.

The ending of Dreamspeaker is a nightmare that momentarily paralyzes one's senses, and in an explosion of events wraps up the story.

Tem Eyos Ki and the Land Claims Question is a revealing story which explores a young Indian woman's state of mind with refreshing wit and great emotional depth. As in Dreamspeaker, the author points to the helpful role of the aboriginal spirit, especially in the face of man's mental or physical deformity. Here again Ms. Cameron makes no distinction between races, but rather emphasizes cultural differences. (Peter in Dreamspeaker was a white boy, and we are not certain about the mute.)

There is also a Peter (called Pete) in Tem Eyos Ki, an odd-looking halfbreed who only just survives a difficult birth. But Pete, "this shrivelled old-man thing," regarded by the people on the reserve as a sacred child "sent to show us something," is only one of several characters struggling to survive. Another is a rabbit with infected ears, whose cleverly handled story promotes the main theme of disillusionment in Indian-white relationships.

In Dreamspeaker and Tem Eyos Ki and the Land Claims Question the author deals directly or indirectly with a conflict arising from the white man's intrusion on the Indian way of life. Some readers may wish Ms. Cameron be less partisan and more subtle when dealing with the subject. Her intimate knowledge of the Indians in their own setting is obviously an asset, but it will only work for her as long as she stays detached.

The two stories in the book emphasize character and mood rather than plot, the most challenging of tasks for any writer. Ms. Cameron does it exceptionally well, progressively establishing a reputation as a dedicated artist of intriguing style and extraordinary poetic sensitivity.

The Salty Sting of Truth

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

It's difficult, if not impossible, for Canadians living in the south to know what is happening in the Arctic.

We sense, uneasily perhaps, that vast changes are altering the land and the natives there and that tragedy is as common as the snow and ice that forms almost our only picture of the north.

The newspapers and magazines we read may tell us certain facts about the situation in the Arctic but the facts, oddly enough, may often leave us with the unavoidable feeling that every one of them is somehow another lie.

A curious situation! — one that Orwell, for one, would surely appreciate in his own grim way. And surely Orwell, along with anyone else enamoured of the elaborate lie we call fiction, would love the salty sting of irony that touches one's blood after reading Yves Theriault's latest novel: for here, at last, is truth.

One knows there is truth here because the people in this novel — and there are only two who matter — are real as starkly as any of the readers of their story are real.

It's a simple enough tale: Agoak, a native trained in accounts and computers, moves to Frobisher Bay and finds work in a bank because he cannot accept the old ways and lives of his people. He rents a house (in the native quarter!), marries Judith, who finds work in a cafe, and slowly enters the life of the town.

"For (Agoak)," Theriault writes, "it was enough to live in harmony with those around him. Such harmony engendered mutual respect, and made race unimportant."

But does it?

Judith, for one, is uneasy in her new life; her uneasiness is intensified when she speaks to the nomads who occasionally come into Frobisher or listens to the old women Kuksuk who tells her that " 'Some Inuit are more white than the Whites. They're traitors, they don't deserve to live!' ".

But Agoak wins promotion in his job, Judith becomes pregnant, and the future begins to be seen by both of them as a comfortable dream that with patience and trust they will eventually attain.

They never do, though. Something happens that forces them out of the dream into a reality that was there all along. But now, of course, neither Agoak nor Judith are as well equipped as they once were to live in that reality. Inexorably their own lives begin to close in on them. The barrengrounds have no end.

Simply, almost laconically, Theriault thus brings to the fore of our consciousness a situation that began when two or more people first decided to group together to form a reality that stood apart from the one they wanted to leave.

When, in other words, does civilization begin? What is it? What breaks it down? Does it, or did it, ever really exist? Who, in fact, are we?

Agoak himself is clear enough on this:

" 'Your ancestors were savages,' " he tells Kiguktak, " 'and . . . you're a savage too, and always will be. . . This isn't true just of us Inuit, or the Indians in the South. It's true of all men anywhere. There's no such thing as a civilized man.' "

THERIAULT . . . novel records Arctic life

A grim enough conclusion for anyone to make — and one difficult, given the facts of our common history, not to make.

Our veneers in whatever form are probably as thin as the ones over Agoak and Judith, our centres not much different than theirs. They're being tested now and we're not because we're too busy doing the testing with our invasion of their territory, but that is only an accident of history we can only bless — for now. Who's to say when our turn will come, and in what form?

You can, at least, decline your turn to read Thomas York's newest fiction. Though the setting is the same as that of Yves Theriault's novel, any similarity between them ends there.

One must always charitably assume the separation between an author and his character, so suffice to say here that Thomas Byrd, the narrator of this tale, manages to be both racist and sexist in an entirely unfunny way that only illuminates his shallowness and stupidity. A picaresque hero without the least saving grace is simply a bore, and so is his silly story.

Brutal Honesty by 'Successful' Actress

By ANTHONY JENKINS

ASHLEY
. . . vents frustrations

HESTON
. . . superficial memoirs

Elizabeth Ashley's savage account of her career on stage and screen is not an autobiography in the conventional sense. She does not "begin at the beginning" and name-drop her way from anecdote to anecdote. Hers is autobiography in the strict sense: the writer's search for a meaning to life, a journey to the core of identity.

In unravelling herself, she lays bare the psychology of all actresses, and actors for that matter — the drive to create something true and worthwhile, the cop-out for money and fame.

This book is not for those who like a cosy peep into famous lives. It is angry, scathingly frank, brutal in its honesty. Miss Ashley is not, for me, an attractive personality; many readers will find her life-style offensive. Yet her book is more than the total of its abrasive parts. It is "about" being an actress, the rat-race, the insecurity of people who have to sell their personalities to the public, the frustrations of human instruments who strive to express the playwright's music.

At 24 she was the hottest new ingenue on Broadway. She had won a Tony Award, had made the Carpetbaggers, and was starring in Barefoot in the Park, which Neil Simon had written especially for her. At the end of the week in which her picture appeared on the cover of Life, she was locked away in a psychiatric ward: "Welcome to the Sixties, Bessie Mae."

She had suddenly taken stock of herself and found that, despite her fame, she was not a good actress. Or, what is more to the point, she didn't think she was, and felt that those around her knew it. She was a marketable product, a piece of meat to be used, and at any moment "they" would find her out and drop her.

That paranoia, ironically, is what goads actors into greatness or pushes them beyond the breaking-point. It is what Ashley has had to fight with for the past 15 years and which is still her daily terror.

In her journey towards self-dignity, Ashley looks back at her marriage to James Farentino: He had a "walk-on" and she was a star: they threw things at each other. George Peppard, her second husband, was determined not to marry an actress; he wanted a wife and mother, not a neurotic mess. She gave up and married him after losing a fight with the studios, who dropped her after she had confessed to a friend that she was scared, that she felt her work in her previous film was terrible. Those words got back.

During her marriage, she watched Peppard fall apart, accepting rubbishy scripts in order to keep up the payments on the ranch that would give him the security to get out of the business, and raging at the triviality of his work. In his anger he turned on her; they threw things at each other.

But Ashley had a child; through him she knew she was someone who mattered. So she walked out and began her career again from the bottom. In order to eat she took any job going, but tried to use it as an acting exercise, to improve, to be more than the material called for. And she learned about herself and others: that no one around her was secure: that those in power were not all necessarily bad.

As Maggie in the revival of Cat on a Hot Tin Roof things came together. By daring to be excessive, she reached a point where the desire to achieve and the achievement finally met.

She is too honest not to know that an actress must always move on to the next goal. However, out of the wreckage of her past she has found a plank to clutch at, faith in herself, and it's that which gives her book importance, its terrible beauty:

"I know I'll always be able to start clean. It doesn't matter what happened before or what happens when it's over. You stand or fall on who you are that moment in time and space and the universe."

Charlton Heston's book is not a conventional autobiography either. It is made up of random jottings from his yearly appointment books "with room at the bottom of each page for a hundred words or so." The importance of those words for the writer has been "to teach myself to choose better. Anyway, that's more or less what they're about. Making choices."

To the reader, that's not nearly so apparent. One plows through this bulky volume in search of moments of soul-probing, of critical self-assessment. Instead the choices are professional: tennis matches to play, flights to catch, worries about make-up and costumes. The comments about his work touch only its surface.

The Journals seem to reflect Heston's craggy, upright screen image. He's an all-American "square," endearing if you admire that sort of thing, boring if you can't. And there are things to admire; he adores his wife, is proud of his children, values his power as a star. He notes a "flattering" explanation of his popularity given to him by a journalist in Taiwan: "You represent the Confucian virtues: responsibility, justice, courage, and moderation."

On the other hand, I find part of this masculine virtue smug and blinkered. His view of life, like his writing style, is unpleasantly hairy-chested and Hemingwayesque: "Meanwhile, I'm honest-to-God getting better in Macbeth. It's not clear to me why this is happening (or why it didn't happen sooner, if you like), but there are a lot more shadings in the part now. I'm pleased to grow."

The more interesting things in the book are glimmers of a "sub-test." There are flickers of trouble behind his marriage. As he reaches the Seventies there are hints that Heston is out-of-fashion, accepting cameo parts to stay in the money. Perhaps his life in the studios is not so satisfying after all, for he turns more and more to the stage in order to tackle parts which he calls "man-killers." And throughout the diaries he's driven on; when one picture is "in the can," he's worried about being out of work.

Like Elizabeth Ashley, Charlton Heston has rooted his idea of himself and his art in his love for his family, but unlike her he is unable to stop the roundabout long enough to take a close look at his own reality. Perhaps he genuinely believes in his image; or perhaps he does not dare to question it.

Hanta Yo: An unusual novel That penetrates Indian consciousness

Books about North American Indians are not my favorite reading and you will rarely, if ever, see them mentioned in this column. Like most readers, I have had my fill of the stereotype Indian, created by well-meaning sociologists, who is either an outcast on a reservation or a pathetic misfit in the city. Such books create guilt feelings, and who needs that? Worse still are books depicting caricature Indians of long ago inhabiting a simple world consisting chiefly of shamans, legends and feasting, a world almost totally divorced from fact.

Thanks to these portraits of, on the one hand, the modern bewildered Indian savagely severed from his roots and, on the other hand, the childlike Indian who never was, it is extremely difficult today to convince anyone that there is a book on the subject that should be read. But that is my intent, and if I do my job properly you won't rest content until you have obtained a copy of Hanta Yo, by Ruth Beebe Hill.

The story behind this book is so interesting that I think I'll begin there. The author spent no less than 28 years working on her book, her first major published work, and the process of writing the novel will undoubtedly go down in literary history as a legend.

For 13 years she did research on reservations in the United States and Canada, always without a notebook, camera or tape recorder. She soon learned that the only way to obtain reliable information was by commenting on something instead of asking questions; otherwise, she says Indians would trot out their most imaginative liar — a lesson which, if adopted, might possibly justify the existence of the expensive coterie of so-called linguistic experts on the provincial government's payroll!

The novel, Hill had decided, was to describe the world of the Dakotah Sioux from the late 1700s to the 1830s, and after 13 years of research she felt ready to write it. But she soon ran into a snag. She found she couldn't do full justice to the story without a far greater knowledge of the Sioux language than she possessed. She spread the word and all kinds of people offered their services, and all of them proved to be useless. Then, out of the blue, appeared a full-blooded Santee Sioux named Chunksa Yuha.

Chunksa had been working in the aerospace industry in California when he heard about Ruth Beebe Hill. Suffering from hypertension, he was looking around for something better to do with his life. He went to see Hill in her Los Angeles Home. He was just the man Mrs. Hill had been looking for, and without further ado the two of them plunged into a session which lasted for 53 hours non-stop.

Mrs. Hill and her husband invited Chunksa to stay with them. That was 15 years ago and he's still with them, an integral part of the family. All are now residents of San Juan Island, where the book was completed.

Chunksa did a lot more than just help with vocabulary. For one thing, he stated that an Indian is a man of habitual spiritual consciousness — and then had to spend the next three years explaining what this meant. And it is this conception, thoroughly understood by the author, which makes Hanta Yo the outstanding book it is.

He also explained that there were actually three languages spoken by the Indian, one for males, another for women, and a third esoteric form of speech used in ceremonies. The dogged author had to cultivate a frame of mind to accept this.

Years of Effort

After years of effort, the two of them reworked the novel into the various tenses used by Indians, then translated the entire lengthy manuscript into Dakotah — then back into the English of 1806 with the help of a Webster dictionary published that year.

The first publisher the manuscript was sent to sat on it for three years and then got cold feet because the author was unknown and the subject was Indians. The second publisher (Doubleday) accepted the manuscript and gave it to the same editor who had worked on Alex Haley's Roots. The rest is publishing history — a Book of the Month Club selection, an upcoming TV series, and a sale of 75,000 copies prior to publication.

The success is well deserved. Hanta Yo (which means "clear the way," a phrase with many meanings, all of them fully exploited in the novel) is unique: such a venture has never before been attempted and, for obvious reasons, never will again.

Based on a document recorded on tanned hide by a 'rememberer' (historian) of the Mahto band of the Teton Sioux, it is the story of an original people, a multi-generational saga which relates for the first time an Indian culture from the inside. It describes the Indian way of life before the white man came on to the red man's territory, before any influencing contact took place with traders and missionaries.

The narrative focuses on two families, each of which produces an exceptional son, and these two become the central figures who, by strength of character, exemplary conduct, and the revival of ancient ceremonies, manage to unite and strengthen a people in danger of losing their heritage after being demoralized by whisky, given to them in exchange for buffalo hides, and even their wives, by the first white traders to penetrate the Plains. Following this fatal contact, only striving of the most heroic kind is able to preserve the identity of the Mahto band.

Contact with whites occurs only towards the close of this 812-page novel. Before that fatal meeting we are treated to a superb picture of the intricate daily life of a people perfectly in tune with nature, a people guided by the accumulated wisdom of elders, a people who regard individuality as paramount but who willingly submerge individuality for the needs and safety of the tribe.

As we travel from camping-ground to camping-ground, always in pursuit of the buffalo, the provider of food, clothing, and some healing properties, we come to know members of the tribe intimately. We witness courtship and marriage and any number of complex tribal ceremonies and we are present at the birth of children; we watch as these same children are schooled for life through play, intruction, and example. And then we see how each youth finds his niche, either as wise man, warrior, scout, entertainer or in some other function considered essential to the happiness and welfare of the whole.

By and large, women received a raw deal, but essentially no worse than women in every society on earth during the 18th and 19th centuries. Their task was to dance attendance on their husbands and bear the children, and their status in the tribe was based on the degree of their submissiveness and their ability to cook, make clothes, and keep a tidy home. Like women everywhere, their lives were circumscribed. They were treated as chattels and taken for granted. But — and it's a big but — no other kind of life was known to them, which minimized any discontent.

It was not a wholly idyllic life for anyone: the tribe contained some unpleasant characters, cruelties were perpetrated and factions developed; and there were always tensions. But on the whole life was good for these people who understood and accepted their place in the universe and were grateful for, and in awe of, all nature, to which they were attuned and which sustained them.

False Values

There is every reason to believe that life would have continued in the same pattern if the white man had not intervened with his foul presence, his false values, and of course his whisky.

Incidentally, nearly all North American Indians have type O blood, and the author's husband, a retired medical researcher, believes there is something in Indians' enzymes — Dr. Hill's research specialty — that causes acute alcoholism and psychotic behavior among Indians who drink.

I see that without realizing I was doing so, I have dealt with this novel as if it were non-fiction. That is a salute to the author's graphic descriptive powers and the sheer brilliance of her writing. In truth, Hanta Yo is more than fact and more than fiction. It is a linguistic tour de force and a wonderful tribute to a people whose lives demonstrated a memorable example of that hard to define habitual spiritual consciousness.

It also has the authority of a detailed ethnographic study and as such must be regarded as a major achievement in the exploration of North American Indian culture. And in addition to all that, it is packed with the adventure and excitement of a novel, a novel unique in conception and execution, a novel not to be missed.

Memorable Moments with a Clever Literary Journalist

By EDWARD M. WHITE

Reading Wilfrid Sheed is like watching a fine but flashy ballet. The skill and grace, the wild leaps and risky combinations are so evident that technical brilliance threatens to overwhelm substance; one keeps fearing the slip that never occurs.

This second collection of Sheed essays never misses a beat. It is a stunning performance, filled with memorable moments and most quotable quotes. While some readers are likely to find the unremitting cleverness a strain in large doses, the 52 brief pieces, mostly recent reviews from the New York Times or the New York Review of Books, represent the highest quality of journalism. Here is consistently entertaining reviewing, verging upon criticism on the one hand, the personal essay on the other.

While most of Sheed's topics are book-related, they vary widely and tend to be socially inclusive. A series on the "Beats" surveys a miniculture; pieces on Watergate, or the political conventions, or various minority literaures all wind up as social commentary; essays on writers such as Orwell, Connolly, Waugh or Baldwin range over a corpus of works, lives and times.

Nonetheless, there is no mistaking the focus: the cleverness of Sheed. His prose shares the qualified praise Sheed gives to Tom Wolfe: It is "a distorting mechanism. He maintains that he finds a language proper to each subject, a special sound to convey its uniqueness; but loyal readers may find that this language is surprisingly similar, whether dealing with stock-car racing or debutantes, and that it obliterates uniqueness and drags everything back to Wolfe's cave."

"It looks as if Henry Luce is going to go down in history as a mythical beast. And serve him right."

"Last year Eire did for writers and artists what the United States does for oilmen: made their gushings virtually tax-free."

"Of Ezra Pound, as of Bobby Fischer, all that can decently be said is that his colleagues admire him."

"Somebody had to pay for the Polish jokes and the Agnew watches, and it might as well be the White Anglo-Saxon Protestants. Not necessarily because they started them (as we shall see, there is some question whether Wasps ever have any fun at all) but because it is their turn to pay for something."

The body of an essay dances around the topic, sparks flying, giving serious opinions and real information under cover of wit. Sheed is deeply informed, extraordinarily well read and basically decent and sensible. His opinions are valuable and, within the limits of five pages or so, well earned.

The closings tend to be sharp and clear, drawing in tightly on the subjects. Thus some incisive writing on Hemingway and Fitzgerald concludes neatly: "Anyone interested in the tone of American writing in the '20s, that sense of a party going wrong, of sudden tears and dash for the bathroom, must accept both these men in a harmony they could never create for themselves. Together, they make one hell of a writer."

Newly, Truly Great Artist

By DICK MAURICE

Every once in a long while a truly great artist emerges, an artist whose gift makes people remember his talent all of their lives.

Such an artist is Anthony Newly. Singer, actor, author, lyricist, composer and mime artist.

His show, "Stop The World, I Want To Get Off"; "The Roar Of The Grease Paint, The Smell Of The Crowd", which he composed; his movie "The Small World of Sammy Lee", and his many television appearances have made him known the world over, as well as established him as one of the leading artists of the century.

But what about the song "Candy Man": Do the lyrics refer to drugs?

MAURICE: You wrote the song "Candy Man". Lou Rawls said you originally gave it to him to record and that he took it to a recording company and they said, the lyrics of "Candy Man" refer to a drug dealer, a pusher, and he couldn't record it.

NEWLY: That's an extraordinary story and I compliment Mr. Rawls on it and the fact that it isn't true is neither here nor there.

MAURICE: Well, what about the lyrics? Do they represent something other than candy?

NEWLY: They didn't for us but obviously for a lot of people in the drug trade they did. I didn't know that candy meant drugs and I'm fairly hip.

MAURICE: Like your wonderful song, "What Kind Of Fool Am I", there must be some kooky, offbeat things that you do. What are some of the foolish things that you do?

NEWLY: Well, a great many things. I've never pretended to be particularly bright. I mean for instance, I left school at the age of 14, knowing how to read, how to add a few things, knowing roughly where Africa was in relationship to America, but I never had an education so I'm not a very bright man.

MAURICE: Yet you give the appearance of being a very bright man.

NEWLY: I think I'm street-wise. I think I'm perceptive.

I think I'm a very bad judge of character. I've taken unto myself friends and business associates which wasn't altogether wise because I've never really understood character. I've never been ruthless enough.

But I also feel I've been protected all my life by some strange kind of fate. I don't believe in any God or anything like that but I do take a fancy to myself that perhaps my ship has a course and I think that most of the things that happen on either side of it are not important, really.

MAURICE: But you do believe that there is a force that is sort of overseeing your life?

NEWLY: I think there is a plan.

I'm very interested in the Zen Buddhist principle that we are all composed of God, that everything is made of God, then again, whatever God is.

I do tend to live now, totally for the moment. For instance, this moment I'm living now is the only moment I have for there is no past or future. And I've found a great deal of peace since I found that.

MAURICE: We talked earlier about your having a limited education. What was your childhood, what were your parents like?

NEWLY: I had a fairly miserable childhood. Don't forget that when I was 8, the Second World War was declared and I was taken from my mother and sent to foster parents twice during the course of the war.

I lived, first of all, in a tiny cottage with a very domineering, strange witch of a lady, three years of abject misery.

Then we came back to London, bombs arrived and we were shipped of again.

This time I was sent to the home of an old vaudeville performer which is why I am where I am today. He taught me how to sing and to dance and to tell stories.

Much of my childhood was very bizarre and not terribly happy and therefore I have an enormous affinity for children and their feelings.

MAURICE: What one characteristic of yourself would you really like to leave to your children when you are gone?

NEWLY: Unfortunately, they are victims of their genes as I am of mine. I have already left them their legacy in their character, the part of me they have already. I want them to create out of their own lives only what they want.

I don't want them to be rich or famous but I desperately want them to be happy. And I would want that for all children.

Nashville's Finest 'Super Pickers'

Nashville's finest, the Nashville Super Pickers, abandon their Country Capital studio digs for a special trip to centre stage on Austin City Limits Friday, April 27, at 11 p.m. on Channel 9. Sharing the concert bill is another of country music's favorite sons, singer and songwriter Tom T. Hall.

Collectively, the Nashville Super Pickers have played on Studio sessions for artists like Elvis presley, Bob Dylan, Chet Atkins, Tammy Wynette and any number of country music's superstars. It is a rare hit record that comes out of Nashville that doesn't have at least one of the Super Pickers among its credits.

The Super Pickers' venture into the limelight brings numbers like Rollin' in My Sweet Baby's Arms, Sweet Dreams, Shenandoah, Wabash Cannonball, and a Bob Willis medley of Faded Love/Maiden's Prayer/San Antonio Rose.

Tom T. Hall, voted into the Songwriter's Hall of Fame by the Country Music Association, has been called the "storyteller" for his musical portraits of seldom-heard-from America. At least one song written by Tom T. Hall has been on country music's national popularity charts every year of this decade, starting with Harper Valley P.T.A., written for Jeannie C. Riley in '69.

Tim and his band perform several of his best-known selections, including Ballad of 40 Dollars, Clayton Delaney, What have You Got to Lose and Old Dogs, Children and Watermelon Wine.

'Puppet Star Great Ballerina'

Miss Piggy has a rival — not for the heart of Kermit the Frog — but for the attention of television viewers. Henrietta Hippo, one of the puppet stars of "The New Zoo Revue," is an accomplished ballerina, opera singer and gourmet cook, who has her eye on winning the next Ms. America contest.

The Monday through Friday children's series tries to establish certain ideals to offset the pressures facing so many youngsters. It's a show with a moral: it places primary importance on being a good person.

A repertoire of two humans (Doug Momary and Emily Peden) and three life-size puppets (Henrietta Hippo, Freddie the Frog and Charlie the Owl) star in the daily series.

Using Freddie the Frog as the central character, creators Barbara Atlas and Doug Momary went on to create Henrietta Hippo — "the quintessential Southern belle, the eternal female" — and Charlie the Owl — "the one who thinks he knows everything."

Freddie, like Peter Pan, is the eternal little boy. He delights in the wonders of nature and is always ready to investigate and enjoy life. A bit slow to learn and too guilible for his own good, Freddie's trust often leads him to accept tall tales and makes him the brunt of jokes. But Freddie is too jolly to let it bother him; he takes it all in stride.

Henrietta Hippo is the Scarlet O'Hara of "The New Zoo Revue." A delicate, soft-spoken lady, whose accent reveals her Southern heritage. She is something of a flirt, forever blushing and acting devilishly shy.

Doug and Emmy Jo are the father and mother figures, who demonstrate through music how life should be lived.

Doug is often called "The Burt Bacharach of the playskool set." That's because he's written all the music and lyrics for the daily syndicated program — a total of more than 600 songs.

Doug's songs aren't exactly Burt Bacharach fare, however, since they range from the United States judicial system to the value of dressing neatly. "On 'The New Zoo Revue,' we try to teach through music," explains Doug.

"I don't think you should write down to children," he continues. "They're much too smart. Actually, I follow the same principle that any good musical does: The music must further the plot, and the song must further the action.

"We keep the programs structually simple, although the ideas can be quite complicated. We start with a few, well defined characters whom the children understand immediately. Then we take one theme and develop it fully. Then I write three or four songs for each show."

According to Emily: "We need to give children more than just information . . . we have to try to show them the right and wrong ways to live. So we take very simple but important ideas — such as not hurting people — and get them across through music."
